Vietnam Peace Pact Bared

Peace Terms

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Following are the main points of an agreement to end the Vietnam War which North Vietnam said today had been worked out between the United States and North Vietnam at secret negotiations:

1. The United States respects the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Vietnam as recognized by the 1954 Geneva agreements.

2. Twenty-four hours after the signing of the agreement, a ceasefire shall be observed throughout South Vietnam. The United States will stop all its military activities and end the bombing and mining in North Vietnam. Within 60 days, there will be a total withdrawal from South Vietnam of troops and military personnel of the United States and those of foreign countries allied with the United States and with the Republic of Vietnam.

The two South Vietnamese parties shall not accept the introduction of troops, military advisers, and military personnel, armaments, munitions and war material into South Vietnam. The two South Vietnamese parties shall be permitted to make periodical replacements of armaments, munitions, and war materials that have been worn out or damaged after the ceasefire, on the basis of piece for piece of similar characteristics and properties. The United States will not continue its military involvement or intervene in the internal affairs of South Vietnam.

WILL RELEASE PoWs

3. The return of all captured and detained persons belonging to the parties will take place in parallel with the withdrawal of American troops.

4. The principles for the exercise of the South Vietnamese peoples right to self-determination are as follows: The South Vietnamese people shall decide themselves the political future of South Vietnam through genuinely free and democratic general elections under international supervision.

The United States is not committed to any political tendency or to any personality in South Vietnam, and it does not seek to impose a pro-American regime in Saigon.

National reconciliation and concord will be achieved, the democratic liberties of the people ensured. An administrative structure called the National Council of National Reconciliation and Concord of three equal segments will be set up to promote the implementation of the signed agreements by the provisional revolutionary government of the Republic of South Vietnam (Viet Cong) and the government of the Republic of Vietnam (Saigon) and to

The Vietnam war is all but over for the United States.

The White House announced today that an agreement would be signed "within a matter of weeks" ending the war and bringing home U.S. troops and prisoners of war.

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger made the announcement in Washington at a specially called news conference. The U.S. move appeared to have been forced on the White House by Hanoi's announcement of terms of the agreement earlier today.

Kissinger said the nine points of the agreement as announced on Radio Hanoi are essentially correct. (See separate story).

Hanoi said the United States had agreed to sign a peace pact next Tuesday, a week before the presidential election, but then backed off and asked for further negotiations, saying it was having difficulty getting Saigon to go along.

North Vietnam accused the U.S. of bad faith in putting off implementation of the agreement three times on the grounds that it was having difficulty in obtaining the agreement of the South Vietnamese government of President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Kissinger, however, said in his news conference he is convinced Thieu will accept the terms of the cease-fire.

In the first reaction from Saigon, the government's official radio said:

"A separate agreement between North Vietnam and the United States does not concern us in any way. We in South Vietnam have the right of self-determination."

However, the Saigon broadcast did not say whether Thieu would oppose a Hanoi-Washington settlement of the war.

Unofficial sources in the presidential palace said earlier that Thieu would not be averse to a Hanoi-Washington agreement as long as the United States continued its Vietnamization and other military and economic commitments to South Vietnam.

In a broadcast Tuesday, Thieu conceded a ceasefire could come soon but said he never would agree to a coalition government with the Viet Cong.

The Hanoi proposal would have Saigon and the Viet Cong negotiate for an election of a coalition government.

Kissinger claimed one of the problems which still needed to be settled before an agreement was signed was whether Washington should sign the agreement on behalf of South Vietnam.

He said this was not a serious difficulty, but it is understandable that the South Vietnamese, who have suffered the most during the war and who must remain under the settlement, "should want to sign their own peace treaty."

Kissinger said a final agreement could be reached after one more meeting of three or four days with Hanoi's negotiators, and would result in a cease-fire to be followed within 60 days by the withdrawal of U.S. troops and the release of all American prisoners.

He said the timing of the agreement was not motivated by the presidential election. The administration had "no intention" of disclosing it and would not have if Hanoi had not broken the news.

At the Paris peace talks, the U.S. officially protested Hanoi's disclosure of the agreement. Ambassador William Porter called it a "most unfortunate violation of our understanding," but Hanoi de-

CRTC REFUSES CABLE TV HIKE

OTTAWA — The Canadian Radio Television Commission denied today an application by Victoria Cablevision Ltd. to amend its cable television broadcasting licence for Victoria to increase the monthly service charge to $5 from $4.50.

The commission said the applicant failed to convince it that an increase in subscriber fees is necessary for the maintenance and improvement of subscriber service.

This decision takes into consideration, said the commission, the applicant's current financial position in relation to its estimate of the costs of the improvements proposed and that the applicant has kept subscriber fees constant for 11 years.

The commission has, in its policy statement on cable television, taken the position that cable systems are a part of the over-all broadcasting system and that they should contribute to development of that system.

In this way, the broadcasting system will be strengthened and broadcastiig service available to cable subscribers will thereby be improved.

Prison Guards Book Off 'Sick'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Most of the guards at the nearby Millhaven maximum security penitentiary began booking off sick today in what they described as a protest over the refusal of senior penitentiary officials to listen to their grievances.

A spokesman said the action will utlimately leave only about 10 to 15 guards on duty during a shift. There are 365 convicts at the prison 13 miles west of here.

He predicted the normal 35-man day shift will be cut to less than half with the four watchtowers being manned as well as six control centres within the prison.

A spokesman, who wished to remain unidentified, said only enough manpower will be reporting for work to feed the convicts and keep the institution secure.

The guards' action came after Millhaven authorities met demands of the prisonets Wednesday to allow them free movement within their living units from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. each day after the privilege was cancelled earlier in the week, the guard said.

He said an estimated 80 per cent of the convict population refused to work and staged a sit-down strike before meeting with officials from the senior administrative staff.

Last week Douglas Alkenbrack, Progressive Conservative candidate for Frontenac-Lennox and Addington, produced a report that said the warden's authority at Millhaven had been usurped by incompetent officials who out-ranked him.

It also predicted further trouble among the convicts, many of whom took part in the Kingston penitentiary riot of 1971 which left two dead and caused more than $1 million damage.

Surprise Arms In Grit Arsenal

Times News Services

While opposition spokesmen spent the fifth-last day of the federal election campaign attacking the government economic record, the Liberal party threw two surprises into the political battle Wednesday.

The first was the experimental use of U.S.-style direct mail, in the form of a letter from Prime Minister Trudeau to individual voters.

The second was Mrs. Trudeau, who accompanied him to an Edmundston, N.B., rally Wednesday night and was to join him in campaigning today in Fredericton and several Ontario centres.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, speaking in a church hall near Toronto, said a Conservative government could cut unemployment in half.

His method would consist of "liberating the spirit of enterprise which we believe now is the prisoner of a policy that is putting a death tax on personal initiative."

MORE THAN ONE WAY

In London, Ont., New Democrat Leader David Lewis told a student audience there are other ways than nationalization to make industry operate for the public good.

The fourth party leader, Real Caouette of Social Credit, drew 1,000 enthusiastic persons to a rally in Drummondville, Que., where Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin is running for re-election. Caouette appealed to youth to work within the political system by helping parties like Social Credit.

Although Trudeau spent less time Wednesday campaigning than the other three leaders, he travelled the farthest of all — from Vancouver, where he spent most of the day resting, to Edmundston.

His chartered DC-9 jet made a brief stop in Ottawa to pick up Mrs. Trudeau, who

MORE CANDIDATES THAN AUDIENCE

HALIFAX (CP) — Candidates outnumbered the audience at a meet-your-candidate session here Wednesday night.

Four Halifax area candidates in Monday's federal election turned up for the public meeting along with two reporters, a campaign manager, the meeting organizer and the wife of one of the contenders.

The general audience numbered three.

Students Stumped

VANCOUVER (CP) — A survey conducted Wednesday by television station CHAN among 30 University of British Columbia students revealed that less than half the students could name Canada's four major political parties and their leaders.

The television station undertook the survey following comments by Humphrey Mostyn, the returning officer in Vancouver Centre that too few people know what is going on inn the current election campaign.

Of the 30 UBS students questioned, 18 knew the name of their home riding and half knew the name of the candidate who has represented the riding in the last house. Fourteen could name the political parties and their leaders.

Canada Faces Rough Times

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Canada's chief statistician and an economist today predicted rough times ahead for Canada on unemployment and an economic downturn.

Sylvia Ostry said her projection is for 2.6 million more workers in the labor force by 1980 than there were in 1970—a growth of about 30 per cent in the decade or 2.4 per cent a year.

This compares with an expected increase of 1.4 per cent a year in the United States, and less than one half of one per cent yearly in Sweden and Japan.

And economist Carl Beigie said that figures available next month will show "a very sharp downturn" in the rate of real economic growth."

"Listening to some of the commentaries that have been made in the past month or so, one gets the impression that this year ended with the second quarter, from which point 1973 will carry forward in an onward and upward march to full recovery.

"When results for the third quarter become available next month, some of the optimism about the 'booming' Canadian economy is going to be moderated."

Beigie, executive director of the Private Planning Association of Canada, said: "Virtually every recent indicator — retail sales, merchandise trade, new orders for manufactured goods, manufacturing inventories, industrial production, unemployment — suggests a very sharp downturn in the rate of growth of real economic activity between the second and third quarters."

Miss Ostry, chief statistician for Statistics Canada, cautioned the annual business outlook seminar of the Conference Board of Canada that her predictions were based on many assumptions and projections.

The conference board is a business-oriented research organization. The annual conference brings together top experts from business, government, universities and other organizations for a wide-ranging view of the future.

"The numbers are pretty impressive," Miss Ostry said.

"Obviously, the challenge to decision makers caused by the need to generate something close to 2.5 million new jobs in 10 years will be substantial."

FALLING POUND SHAKES FRANC

LONDON (AP) — The British pound fell to a record low for the third straight day today, unsettling world money markets and affecting other leading currencies including the French franc.

By early afternoon the pound was down to $2.3463 (U.S.) here, a drop of nearly 1½ cents from the close of $2.36 Wednesday night and an all-time low.

London dealers said the Paris foreign exchange market was "panicky." The French franc weakened against the U.S. dollar in moves related to the pound's troubles.

The pound has been falling because in the view of financial markets it was over-valued, due primarily to Britain's rate of inflation, the highest in Western Europe, and other economic troubles.

Once the pound had sharply declined, however, lowering its exchange rates against other currencies, it left the weaker ones among them exposed as the next targets for reduced exchange rates, the French franc prominent among them.

Dealers in London said the key element was government efforts to control inflation. Business, trade union and government leaders met today in an attempt to work out a voluntary price and wage restraint program for controlling inflation, now running at some 10 per cent a year.

Subsidies for Private Hospitals

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government announced Wednesday that it plans to subsidize private hospitals which show need to help them withstand the effects of the provincial minimum wage hike on their operating costs.

Premier Barrett and Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi indicated hospitals which apply for government help will receive it on an individually-negotiated basis. Levi said some have already indicated such need.

Conservative house leader Scott Wallace said he had received a letter from Glengarry Private Hospital of Victoria informing him that the daily rate per patient would be going up to $16 from $14 as a result of the minimum wage hike.

Barrett answered by saying that the government does not indend to allow the wage hike to make any private hospital patients suffer.

Outside the house, Levi said that cases of hospitals requiring assistance will be dealt with on an individual basis.

He said "there is no way we will blanket everybody in on this" and added that hospitals will have to show that they are "specific cases of hardship."

The rate paid by the rehabilitation department to private hospitals which take in welfare cases varies between $280 and $310 per month per patient.

Levi said in some cases the hospitals are heavily dependent on the welfare cases sent to them by the province, indicating that the operators are not in a position to pay the increase in the minimum wage level.

Barrett said during the debate that it is not the policy of the government to favor profit-making in the health field and indicated that his government considers it an "urgent priority" to provide non-profit chronic care services under the framework of the B.C. hospital insurance plan.

Barrett said it has been a promise of the Social Credit party since 1956 to remove the profit-making aspect from the health field and charged that the Socreds never did anything about it when they were government.

"We are now the government and we intend to move on this," Barrett said. "We want the operators of private hospitals to understand that we don't believe they should be operating at a profit. We mean it and we intend to act on it."

The premier said the government would move "with as much dispatch and openness as we can."

He said it has been difficult for the government to determine the effect of the minimum wage hike on the various sectors of the community because there was no research ever done on the subject by the previous administration.

The subsidies going to the private hospitals from the welfare department, he said, would hopefully be on an interim basis until the province can set up the non-profit

. . . VIETNAM PEACE NEAR

nied there was any agreement to keep it secret.

There would be no limitation, under the agreement, on U.S. economic assistance to Vietnam. But military assistance would be limited to keeping arms and equipment at current levels. This provision pertains to both sides.

The North Vietnamese peace plan made no mention of the cease-fire being applied to Cambodia and Laos as well as Vietnam, as both Thieu and Nixon have demanded in the past.

Instead, it said "all parties in the Vietnam war" would recognize the sovereignty and neutrality of the two other Indochinese nations, and the U.S. would end all military activities in the two countries, withdraw all troops and send no more troops or weapons there.

Nixon and Thieu also have demanded that any cease-fire be internationally supervised, and the plan provided for formation of an international committee on military control and supervision as well as an international conference on Vietnam to be called within 30 days of the signing of the agreement.

Hanoi said nothing about withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam, which Thieu in his broadcast Tuesday made a condition for his agreement to a truce. Instead, it said the Saigon government and the Viet Cong would "negotiate with each other on disposition and reduction of the troops of each side." This is in line with Hanoi's official contention that it has no troops in South Vietnam.

In Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau said that if Canada were asked to be part of a peace-keeping body in Vietnam, it would not accept unless it was involved in the decision of how peace is to be maintained.

"We said we were willing to participate in peace but we will not do it unconditionally. We would not do it if others arrived at conditions and just said well, 'here they are, we ask you to maintain them'."

While the peace agreement was being discussed around the world, rockets continued to fly across the rice paddies of Vietnam.

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops launched 113 attacks across South Vietnam during the last 24 hours up to dawn today, a Saigon spokesman said.

Along the northern coastal plain south of Da Nang and around Saigon, Communist forces fired scores of rockets into six towns, killing 27 persons and wounding more than 80 others.

In the Mekong Delta, south of the capital, South Vietnamese infantry clashed for several hours with a large Communist force believed to be infiltrating from Cambodia.

organize the general elections, the two South Vietnamese parties will consult about the formation of councils at lower levels.

The question of Vietnamese armed forces in South Vietnam shall be settled by the two South Vietnamese parties in a spirit of national reconciliation and concord, equality and mutual respect, without foreign interference, in accordance with the post-war situation.

PLAN DISCUSSIONS

Among the questions to be discussed by the two South Vietnamese parties are steps to reduce the military numbers of both sides and to demobilize the troops being reduced. The two South Vietnamese parties as soon as possible will do their utmost to accomplish this within three months after the cessefire comes into effect.

5. The reunification of Vietnam shall be carried out step by step through peaceful means.

6. A four-party joint military commission and a joint military commission of the two South Vietnamese parties will be formed.

An international commission of control and supervision will be established.

An international guarantee conference on Vietnam will be convened within 30 days of the signing of this agreement.

7. The government of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (Hanoi), the provisional revolutionary government of the Republic of South Vietnam, the government of the United States of America, and the government of the Republic of Vietnam shall strictly respect the Cambodian and Lao peoples' fundamental national rights as recognized by the 1954 Geneva agreements on Indochina and the 1962 Geneva agreements on Laos, i.e. the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of these countries.

They shall respect the neutrality of Cambodia and Laos. The government of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, the provisional revolutionary government of the Republic of South Vietnam, the government of the United States of America and the government of the Republic of Vietnam undertake to refrain from using the territory of Cambodia and the territory of Laos to encroach on the sovereignty and security of other countries.

Foreign countries shall put an end to all military activities in Laos and Cambodia, totally withdraw from and refrain from reintroducing into these two countries troops, military advisers and military personnel, armaments, munitions and war material.

The internal affairs of Cambodia and Laos shall be settled by the people of each of these countries without foreign interference.

The problems existing between the three Indochinese countries shall be settled by the Indochinese parties on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity and non-interference in each other's internal affairs.

8. The ending of the war, the restoration of peace in Vietnam will create conditions for establishing a new, equal, and mutually beneficial relationship between the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and the United States.

The United States will contribute to healing the wounds of war and to post-war reconstruction in the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and throughout Indochina.

9. This agreement shall come into force as of its signing. It will be strictly implemented by all the parties concerned.

chronic care facilities it desires.

Barrett called such facilities "the ideal goal" and said non-profit organizations like service clubs will be able to participate in their establishment.

Liberal leader David Anderson had also expressed concern in the debate that the private hospital operators would not be able to manage the increase in the minimum wage going to their employees without a downgrading of attention given patients.

The amendments to the Minimum Wage Act were passed unanimously by the house after the debate.

On the subject of the government's getting further into the chronic health care field, Levi said he is holding discussions with Health Minister Dennis Cocke but would not comment further.

TWO ALTERNATIVES

Wallace said outside the house after the debate that there are two alternatives possible for the government in light of Barrett's remarks in the house.

One, he said, is that the government will take over or finance the taking over of existing chronic care facilities and include them under the provisions of the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

The other is that the government will create its own facilities.

Wallace said the cost for the government to incude chronic care patients under the provisions of the BCHIS would be about $10 million a year.

He said there are about 5,000 such patients in private hospitals and another 5,000 who should be, but are not because of economic pressures.

Wallace said he welcomes the government's move since it is similar in philosophy to the NDP move to increase the minimum monthly income for senior citizens to $200.

He said Barrett's statement indicates that the province is willing to go it alone in the revision of chronic care facilities for B.C. citizens if cost-sharing agreements cannot be worked out with the federal government.

thus joined the campaign for the first time since Sept. 23, when security guards tried to prevent her joining him at a Vancouver hotel.

During his Edmundston speech, delivered mostly in French, Trudeau repeated the theme of his recent western tour — that a new consensus has developed across the country, that separatism is on the decline, and that Canadians no longer are in search of themselves.

SEND LETTERS

Earlier, national Liberal headquarters announced that a limited number of Canadians will receive letters from the prime minister before voting day.

Stanfield ripped into government policy before 900 people in a packed hall in Mississauga, Ont.

He said the Liberal government is the chief cause of inflationary psychology today because of its wasteful spending.

The cost of maintaining the federal civil service had increased to $2.1 billion from $1.1 billion in only five years.

Lewis said he has no shopping list of companies an NDP government would nationalize, but added it might be a good idea to nationalize CP Rail and merge it with the CNR to produce a more efficient railway system.

QUESTION LEWIS

Business administration students from the University of Western Ontario took the opportunity of his London appearance to pepper him with questions about his attacks on so-called corporate welfare bums.

Lewis maintained that many large corporations are "getting away with murder," both through the tax system and through loose government control over its incentives grants.

During a Vancouver television appearance Trudeau said he is willing to re-introduce legislation calling for disclosure of campaign funds in the next parliament, but he is not about to name Liberal donors during the current campaign.

The Edmonton Journal, which has supported the Liberal party editorially in every federal election except one in the post-war period, is switching its support to the Progressive Conservatives for Monday's election.

In an editorial, the Journal says the Liberals fall short of the expectations of people in Canada.Pri me Minister Trudeau had not fulfilled the hopes of four years ago.

Ottawa Would Kill Squamish Bulk Port

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis said Wednesday the federal government will kill a proposed bulk coal port proposed for Squamish, 30 miles north of here, if the B.C. Railway decides to go ahead with present plans for the project.

Davis made his comment after releasing a report prepared by his department for a federal-provincial task force study of the Squamish estuary.

The report predicted the development would drastically damage the commerical and sports fishery in Howe Sound. It stopped just short of predicting the fishery would be wiped out by the development.

The report said the possibility of maintaining the food chain on which the fishery depends was "exceedingly remote."

Fisheries officials estimated the combined value of the commercial and sports fishery at $7.5 million annually.

Davis told a news conference that the report had been given to the B.C. Railway and provincial government officials on the task force.

He said he would propose to the B.C. government that a federal-provincial public hearing on the subject be held a few months from now.

"Maybe the B.C. government will say the whole thing is dead anyway. But as long as it's alive I'm going to press for a public hearing," Davis said.

The environment minister said that if necessary the federal government can stop the proposed development of the port either under the fisheries act or through the deparment of transport, which has authority over navigable waters.

The B.C. Railway proposes to dredge a deep-sea shipping channel and bulk coal-loading facility to ship coal to Japan from the Chetwynd area in the peace river district.

CYPRUS BOWL PLAN SLASHED

The Cypress Bowl ski development in West Vancouver will be reduced in scale under the NDP government, Lands Minister Bob Williams said Wednesday.

Williams told reporters that the previous government had planned to spend heavily in the area to "hide a scandalous logging operation" carried out previously.

The socred plan included huge parking lots, heavy equipment and large capital spending which the NDP government is throwing out in favor of a job-intensive scheme of smaller scale.

Williams said the government has no intention of spending taxpayers money on facilities designed mainly for the expert skier.

Dear Alex, He Says And Then Moves On

An NDP-appointed executive assistant who enjoyed only a short stay in the attorney-General's department said today the B.C. civil service has little awareness of social problems and future needs of the province.

Dr. Raymond Rodgers, 37, who became Attorney-General Alex Macdonald's executive assistant shortly after the NDP government took power, mailed copies of his letter of resignation to the legislative press gallery with a note attached commenting on the B.C. civil service.

The resignation letter says the executive assistant post was only planned as a temporary appointment.

Here is the text of Rodgers' release, which was typed on attorney-General's department memorandum paper and post-marked from Vancouver on Wednesday.

"Dear Alex: As you know we both agreed that I would come in and help you out on a temporary basis — given your immediate needs at the time of your appointment to two portfolios.

"I think the time has now come for me to move on to whatever other job the government or party may see fit to use me in. It has been a great pleasure working with you. All the best, Raymond."

Attached was a sheet marked for the press room notice board which reads as follows:

"I take strong exception to Pat Jordan's attacks on those persons appointed by the NDP government.

"She would have the public believe that for 20 years the Socreds hired on an objective basis. In fact, for 20 years every attempt was made to keep progressive thinking persons out of the public service.

"The result has been a public service with very little awareness of many social problems, and of problems of the future — such as the impact of computers and cablevision on our culture and economy.

Ships' Officers Strike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Masters, Mates and Pilots Union went on strike against the Pacific Maritime Association Wednesday in an action that could shut down all U.S. Pacific Coast ports where PMA vessels are moored.

Six pickets from the union were posted at Pier 96 here shortly after a Pacific Far East Lines' barge-carrying freighter, the Japan Bear, arrived. It was the only PMA ship in port here. Officials said there were about 75 PMA ships operating on the West Coast.

A spokesman for the striking union said negotiations broke down on a new contract over the union's demand for rotating jobs among second and third mates. Other issues include wages, hours and working conditions.

In Seattle the union set up picket lines at Seattle docks at 7 a.m. All U.S. ships belonging to the PMA, except those carrying military cargo, are being picketed, said Capt. Rupert Soriano, Seattle agent for Local 6.

In Anchorage, a spokesman for Sea Land Services said the strike could "tie up 90 per cent of the shipping into Alaska."

Terminal manager for Sea Land, Ed Duncza, said the effects would probably not be felt in Alaska for several weeks because Sea Land "had two vessels in over the weekend from Seattle" and another is due Wednesday.

Duncza said most of the big chain stores should have an inventory that will last them for a "couple of weeks," but added that the supplies of produce and fresh meats were not that good. He said on dry commodities there would probably be no problem.

Candidate Sees Swing to NDP

A massive swing to the New Democratic Party from disenchanted Liberals was predicted by Victoria NDP candidate Flemming Hansen Wednesday at an open-house meeting.

"It has become obvious that thousands of progressive-minded people who supported Trudeau in 1968 are totally disgusted with the prime minister's complacent attitude in the face of Canada's serious problems," Hansen said.

"Due to the Tories' weakness there is little hope of replacing the Liberals with a majority government," Hansen stated.

"But there is a definite possibility the New Democrats will form the official opposition, starting a new era in federal politics."

Allan McKinnon, Conservative candidate in Victoria, has asked for the support of the Victoria Labor Council in his opposition to federal immigration policies.

In a letter sent Wednesday to council secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan, McKinnon said that lax immigration policies are "literally stealing jobs away from the Canadian people."

McKinnon said people entering Canada as visitors should not be able to apply for status as a landed immigrant or permanent resident without returning to their homeland and applying from there.

"In times of high unemployment jobs that could be going to Canadians are going to immigrants who have circumvented the proper channels and arrived in Canada via the back door," he said.

A Conservative government will mean an extra $250 in the pocket of anyone earning $5,000 in 1973, Esquimalt-Saanich Conservative candidate Donald Munro said at a campaign meeting Wednesday.

"Mr Stanfield has committed himself to a 4 per cent reduction in personal income tax, retroactive to July of this year," said Munro.

"He has also said the Trudeau government's 3 per cent increase, to go into effect at the first of 1973, will not be implemented by a Conservative administration."

CAR TEST CONTRACT

A motor vehicle inspection station will be built by the provincial government in Nanaimo, it was announced Wednesday.

The $539,800 contract is going to D. Robinson Construction Ltd. of Nanaimo. Public Works Minister Bill Hartley and Attorney-General Alex Macdonald made the announcement jointly.

Mayor Won't Sign Until Writ Served

The bylaw designating 300 acres of North Saanich a development area for the Kingswood golf course and housing proposal will remain unsigned at least until the weekend.

Mayor Trevor Davis was away last week when Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton issued the writ of mandamus compelling the mayor to sign the bylaw passed by council in June.

The mayor is reported to be awaiting formal serving of the writ.

Ald. Paul Grieve said the possibility of appealing the judment has been discussed.

Meanwhile, Philip Holmes of Pemberton Holmes Ltd., agents for the landowner, W. G. Ellis, said he expects negotiations on a land-use contract to be drawn out.

BUILD GOLF COURSE

It will take about a year to draw up a contract and another year before a nine-hole golf course, first phase of the development, can be readied for use, predicts Holmes.

Both Holmes and colleague Douglas Gage have expressed disappointment with the reception given the Kingswood proposal. The scheme has faced many delays since introduction to council in November 1969 and approval in principle one year ago.

"We have hoped that this will set minimum standards for development of the whole municipality," said Homes, who also emphasied that signing the bylaw does not commit the municipality in any way.

A letter dated June 14, 1972, gives assurance that no action will be taken in the event that a land use contract cannot be agreed upon.

Study Hall For Indians

High school students from four Indian reserves on the Saanich Peninsula are being provided with a "study hall" program on week nights in Tsartlip School, Brentwood.

Transportation to the school, where tutors and reference materials are available, has been arranged by the Indian school board.

Molly Pelkey, school and home co-ordinator, says there are 75 students from East and West Saanich, Pat Bay and Cole Bay reserves who can take advantage of the program.

Most of the students achieve much more by studying in classroom environment, she said.

"They find this program really works."

A private organization donated money to operate the buses and pay supervisors after the Indian school board had appealed unsuccessfully to the department of Indian affairs, the First Citizens' Fund and the Indian Art and Welfare Society.

The program is now funded until Christmas, but Mrs. Pelkey says money and additional tutors will be needed to continue the study hall until May.

Towards a Workable Law

Attorney General Macdonald apparently recognizes what Attorney General Peterson did not: that a complete ban on cigarette advertising cannot be enforced provincially — it must be federal in scope. Apart from any consideration of the social, health or economic effects of smoking, this is a sufficient reason for rescinding the earlier provincial legislation and permitting cigarette advertising in printed publications. A law which cannot be enforced is no viable law.

It is clear that legislation could ban cigarette advertisements originating in print or otherwise within the provincial jurisdiction of the British Columbia government, and that this ban could be enforced through penalties or otherwise. But it soon became equally clear that the provincial government could not effectively control the entry of advertising material from outside the province. Magazines printed elsewhere in Canada, or in other countries, could hardly be stopped at the provincial border and stripped of their offending pages, and certainly the threat of some form of censorship could not deter publications of national or international distribution and repute from seeking sales in British Columbia.

Even though the courts recognized the government's jurisdiction in the matter, this did nothing to overcome the physical obstacles to enforcement. The inevitable result was, of course, that British Columbia publications became the victims of unfair discrimination. The outside competition was, in practice, exempt from the prohibition.

The only feasible avenue of action in prohibiting printed cigarette advertising — a worthwhile measure in view of modern medical recognition of the serious effects of prolonged and frequent use of tobacco — would be to re-activate the federal government's earlier move to place a national ban on advertising. Such a country-wide measure could be enforced as between provinces, and with some hope of success as a customs regulation imposed on publications entering the country — although even here the matter of censorship of reading material could become involved.

It is notable that while the NDP bill now before the Legislature appears to open doors by abolishing the publication ban, the legislation in fact confers great powers on the government to regulate promotion, sales, packaging, warning notices and other facets of the tobacco trade, and that other forms of advertising will have some restrictions.

If this and future similar legislation remains based on "hard evidence", as Mr. Macdonald promises, there should be little valid objection to it.

". . . you might be delighted to learn that I gave the old people in the next cell a lighter ball . . ."

The Sweet Juice of Peace

In the orange groves of Israel the fruit is ripening, posing a harvest problem, providing seeds for domestic political difference, and, conceivably, a ray of hope for future peace in that troubled land.

There are not enough Israelis available to pick the entire citrus crop, representing about 20 per cent of the country's exports, and the expanding number of Arabs allowed in from neighboring occupied areas is not yet sufficient to meet harvest needs.

The political difference stems from the fear that an increase in the number of Arabs brought in for the job could lead to the Arabization of the manual labor market, particularly in agriculture, and a serious shift in population balance between the Israelis and their neighbors. It could also define a change in social structure — a concern expressed occasionally by David Ben Gurion — if the use of imported labor should eventually transform the Israelis into a sort of master race, overlording labor.

More optimistic is the attitude of Defence Minister Moshe Dayan. In his view the use of more Arabs would be welcomed because "even if part of these areas eventually goes back to Jordan or other Arab countries, the intermingling of the two economic structures will have created a basis for co-existence and is likely to make the outbreak of a new war more difficult."

The defence minister seems to be on solid ground. Arab fruit pickers admitted into Israel, and enjoying equal pay and social benefits with the Jewish workers, could earn twice as much as they make in their home villages. In spite of the difference in ideologies, such Arab workers might reasonably be expected to ask what they would be fighting for in the way of improved material benefits if they were once more asked to battle Israel.

HAROLD GREER

A Bird's-Eye View of Ontario

TORONTO — Prime Minister Trudeau told the big Liberal rally at Maple Leaf Gardens here that it has not been a dull election despite what the newspapers are saying, and heard against the cheers of some 18,000 admirers it seemed like an obvious enough remark.

But big election rallies can be deceptive. At least 6,000 of the Gardens audience were "contingents" from the Metro area's 24 ridings, some of them bused in from 20 miles away. The off-the-street remainder were mostly young people of questionable voting age who seemed more interested in rock music and the possibilities of a psychedelic happening than in what Mr. Trudeau had to say—and there wasn't much—about politics.

It has been a dull election, at least in this province, and how Ontario votes on Oct. 30 will reflect the dullness. The Liberals seem certain to lose some of their Ontario seats because Trudeaumania is nothing like the factor it was in 1968. The Conservatives will be lucky to hold their own because Robert Stanfield has inspired no one, and the lowly New Democrats stand to pick up some—and perhaps several—because David Lewis has been a minor star of the campaign with his not-so-little list of corporate welfare bums.

Just where these changes will occur will depend on local riding conditions and candidates, with the NDP doing best in the areas it holds in the provincial Legislature. The NDP tends to be unique amongst the major parties in holding its support provincially and federally.

Changing Coats

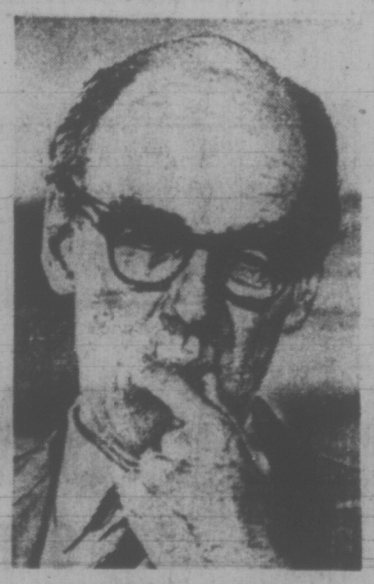
Another factor will be the extent to which normally Conservative voters go Liberal against the NDP. Ganging up on the NDP is fairly common in Ontario politics and it will be encouraged this time by the lacklustre Conservative campaign and Mr. Stanfield's failure to light any fires. This will mean that in some ridings Conservatives will desert weak Tory candidates and vote Liberal to stave off the NDP.

Indeed, the collapse—if that is not too strong a word—of the Conservative campaign has been the dominant feature of the election in Ontario. This province is where Mr. Stanfield has to win: with 88 seats in the Commons and a pro-Conservative bias (the Tories have won the country in only 11 of 25 elections since Confederation but they have carried Ontario 16 times), Ontario has the seats and the potential for a Conservative government at Ottawa, but only the diehards now expect it to happen.

Paul Weed, the Toronto stockbroker who is managing the Conservative campaign in the province, speaks confidently of 55 seats but he refuses all discussion of where they might be. The polls, both public and private, show the Party on the slippery slope, especially in the cities, and it is claimed by the Liberals (and only weakly denied) that Premier William Davis' unusual intervention on Mr. Stanfield's behalf is a desperation decision to avoid total disaster.

This reporter's best guess, after sounding political contacts around the province, is that the Conservatives, with 19 Commons seats at dissolution (this includes ex-Liberals Paul Hellyer in Trinity and Perry Ryan in Spadina), can expect to pick up only one additonal seat.

They can be rated safe in 11 of their



ROBERT STANFIELD

held seats, probable winners in the remaining eight, and fresh victors in Middlesex, a traditionally Conservative riding in southwestern Ontario where Liberal Jim Lind squeaked through in 1968 and then more or less progressively disappeared. William Frank, Mr. Lind's opponent in '68, is a strong candidate and should take the seat.

The Conservatives may also win three ridings where the contests at this writing are too close to call: Don Valley in Toronto, where Liberal Robert Kaplan easily defeated Tory impresario Dalton Camp in 1968 (in the most expensive contest in the country) but this time faces Prof. James Gillies, the likely finance minister in a Conservative government; Halton-Wentworth near Hamilton, where Liberal incumbent John Morison failed to get re-nominated and the provincial Conservative organization of George Kerr, Ontario Secretary for Justice, is very strong; and Ottawa West, a riding of civil servants where Bilingualism is the issue and broadcaster Peter Reilly is running strongly against Liberal incumbent Lloyd Francis, with NDP newcomer Pauline Jewett a close third.

Apart from these faint rays, however, Conservative prospects are bleak indeed. All reports indicate that big gun Allan Lawrence, who left the Ontario cabinet to do or die federally, is going down to defeat in Northumberland-Durham. Frank McGee, a Minister in the Diefenbaker administration, is in trouble in Ontario riding, with members of his executive announcing they will vote for Liberal Norman Cafik.

Ex-Liberal and multimillionaire Steve Roman has displayed a political ineptness which seems certain to guarantee him defeat in his bid to take York North from the Liberals. Tory stalwart Michael Starr's comeback effort in Oshawa-Whitby (he lost to Ed Broadbent of the NDP by 15 votes in 1968) is producing a glorious battle, but the NDP, having lost the seat provincially in 1971 is desperate to hold it federally and probably will.

Divided Kingston Loyalty

And in Kingston and The Islands, political home of former finance minister Edgar Benson for 10 years, Flora MacDonald does not appear to have the edge over Dr. J. W. Hazlett. Miss MacDonald is the highly respected former executive director of the national Conservative Party and has strong family roots in the riding, but it is a seat which tends to go Conservative provincially and Liberal federally, and Dr. Hazlett is a formidable candidate. He came within 188 votes of capturing it for the Liberals in the last provincial election, losing out because of poor organization on the Queen's University campus, where he is on the faculty. It is not a mistake he is likely to repeat this time.

Of the 19 Ontario seats held by the Conservatives in the last Commons, the only one that looks troublesome is Leeds, which was won in '68 by a mere four votes. The local Liberal hierarchy, however, revolted against Mr. Trudeau on the issue of "enforced bilingualism" and Liberal veteran Tom Cossitt sought and won the Conservative nomination. This did not sit well with many Tories at first but Mr. Cossitt's opponents for the nomination are now actively working for him and a strong campaign has been mounted. The city of Brockville will be a dogfight but it appears Mr. Cossitt will hold the seat for the Conservatives.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Grey Hair

I recently attended a seminar on Employment of the Handicapped at the Empress Hotel sponsored by the Community Council of Greater Victoria.

The speakers and panel were well versed in their topics and the whole session was well handled by an excellent chairman.

I found the attendance rather disappointing in regards to the lack of employers, and that the majority were either personnel officers, rehabilitation people or Manpower representatives.

During a question period, I asked a Manpower official if any thought was being given to employing the persons over 50 and under 65, such persons being too old to be hired and too young for Old Age or Canada Pension, and their only handicap in most cases being grey haired with a chronological problem — this being my handicap.

An official from Manpower in the audience was directed to answer my question thus: "We at Manpower do not discriminate against any age group, I am proud to be an older person and proud of my grey hair and that the question does not fit into this seminar."

I must admit that this person was a well groomed and contented looking person, was informed and had an excellent position in manpower, being employed for a considerable time.

My point is this attitude prevails throughout all so-called agencies, "I'm all right, George, what else is new."

Should any of these people be placed in a position of being unemployed at age 62, no pension until 65, grey-haired, a little slower than age 30, little savings and trying to survive in today's competitive labor market, would their attitude be the same? This I doubt.

It is my sincere hope that the new B.C. government will give a friendly ear to older people with a grey hair handicap, also that a new government after Oct. 30 will give more than lip service to this forgotten group of Canadians, that Manpower will give serious consideration to getting work for the over 50s. — "Willing but Grey."

In the Black

I cannot allow the letter from your correspondent Maurice Rookwood "Presure" to go unanswered.

Your correspondent has conveniently forgotten three very important points:

1. The Sandringham strike was referred to the B.C. Labor Relations Board for study and their decision was that the employer had not bargained in good faith with the union. The decision was appealed by the owners but was confirmed in a second decision by the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

2. The Minister of Labor, Mr. Chabot, was then asked to intervene in order to bring the two parties together but took no action. Thereby he was taking sides which is not the function of a minister of labor who is supposed to be impartial.

3. The other nursing homes in Victoria such as Richmond Heights, Glengarry, Glenwarren, etc. have contracts with their unions and seem to be operating in the black. I am quite sure they would not continue operations if they were losing money — M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar Ave.

Appreciated Abroad

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week I read articles about Canada in the Wall Street Journal and they spoke very well of our economic picture.

Last March Barron's Weekly had a glowing article stating that Canada was the only country in the Western Hemisphere that is licking inflation.

Do I have to have an American publication give me an objective view of my native land?

Wherein lies the responsibility of the press? Or is it just a matter of opinion, judgment and evaluation? Then of course anyone's guess is as good as the other man's.

If David Lewis's "Corporate Bums" is true why not come out and say so. If not, why not do as the Toronto Star did weeks ago and say so. Democracies breed demagogues . . . but . . . "intellectual demagogues?" — J. D. Geller, 3801 Riverside Drive, East, New York.

Other Side

At the meeting, on Oct. 18, of the Victoria Labour Council, reported in your issue of Oct. 19, inspection of private hospitals and rest homes was discussed.

Council Secretary Larry Ryan is reported as saying that there had been a controversy over inspections at the

LARRY RYAN

Sandringham Private Hospital. Never having met Mr. Ryan, I do not know with whom he had the controversy, or what it was about.

I have worked at Sandringham for the past six years, and know most things relative to the strike, having been present the day the strikers walked out. We have been inspected many, many times by the most courteous inspectors of the B.C.H.I.S. and it has been a pleasure to meet them at all tiimes.

Another delegate at the above mentioned Labour Council meeting is reported as stating that "private hospitals should be run by the province, not for profit."

As the province has never seen fit to build enough hospitals, private enterprise has filled the urgent need, and in my opinion, the much maligned private hospitals deserve gold medals.—E. Louise Bartlett, Chartered Physiotherapist.

Lawyers

On October 4, 1972, I wrote you in a critical vein about an item appearing in the Times on Louis Lindholm with caption: "Crime No Game, Says City Grit." You published my letter in the Times for October 10.

I try to be objective in my viewpoints, and I now write you to compliment the writer George Oake on his article about Lindholm.

I have never seen an Amazon rain forest, but I will take George Oake's word for it. The offices of Pearlman and Lindholm are just right as a very successful law office. You mention the dress of the receptionist is co-ordinated — right. And, any receptionists I have seen, besides being color co-ordinated, are very fine examples of sharp-looking, intelligent, efficient Canadian girls.

Mr. Lindholm's statement, quote: "I've had a fair output out of this community so I feel it is my social, personal responsibility to put an input back into it." I, personally, thought that was a very good statement. I have always thought that our members in the House of Commons in Ottawa should to a large extent be lawyers. They put their thoughts together in an orderly fashion and can express themselves to their advantage and the advantage of their constituents.

I know about lawyers. I retired in 1967 from almost 30 years in the RCMP. The first place I was stationed was Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, and John Diefenbaker was the first lawyer to cross-examine me on the witness stand. He was a master, of course. Then in Vancouver, while stationed there in the 'fifties, I had experience with some of the best — Tom Dohm, Tom Berger, Angelo Branco and many others. Also, while NCO in charge of Courtenay RCMP detachment, and from 1960 on, working out of Victoria, I met many fine lawyers in connection with my work. So I say — let's get lots of lawyers looking after our affairs in Ottawa.

Basic Pension

Letters to the Editor have been appearing in the daily, weekly, community newspapers since October 1971, urging a basic pension for all Canadian Senior Citizens of $150 a month.

From the Yukon to Newfoundland, our Canadian newspapers have published these letters indicating the nation-wide support enjoyed by our Senior Citizens, the Pioneers of our Country. Pensioners for Action Now have over 17,000 militant members from the Pacific Coast to the East Coast speaking up on their behalf. Every politician and every candidate across Canada has been made aware of the message.

The 1.8 million Senior Citizens represent 15 per cent of the Canadian voters — and it has been estimated that with their families, friends, and Canadians in the 55-64 year bracket, this percentage reaches 25 per cent — and could swing the federal election. That must be a serious thought for all parties and candidates hoping for victory.—Otto Nordling, 121 West 13th St., North Vancouver.

Real Issue?

Can David Lewis or Grace MacInnis tell us when low taxes or plain-packaged, lower priced food meant a square deal or more prosperity for workers? Of course not. Taxes or no taxes, high prices or low prices, the workers are an exploited class under the capitalist profit system. They are robbed, not as consumers, but at the point of production. They produce certain values and receive back in the form of wages but a portion of these values. They average a "living wage," the cost of production of their labor power.

The real issue is whether we retain labor-exploiting and poverty-breeding capitalism or establish the social ownership and democratic worker-control of the economy in the non-political, industrial democracy of bona fide socialism advocated by the Socialist Labor Party, wherein all workers will receive the equivalent of their bountiful product — James Minal, S. Burnaby.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 26, 1912:

If laughter is any evidence of enjoyment, then the audience which listened to the very delightful performance of the popular old Gilbert and Sullivan opera, H.M.S. "Pinafore," given at the Victoria theatre last evening, must indeed have had many moments of keen pleasure. Victoria did not realize that she had so much juvenile talent within her before, or we feel certain that someone would have been inspired with the idea of bringing it together in some such way long before this.

Quebec Is Getting Tired Of Phoney 'Unity' Issue

By ANN CHARNEY

MONTREAL — When Prime Minister Trudeau announced his choice for an election theme — the integrity of Canada — it was greeted in Quebec with a certain amount of weary scepticism. Was it anything more than an attempt to boost Liberal ratings with an old favorite — national unity revisited?

Politicians are well aware how difficult it is to infuse practical issues such as inflation, unemployment or housing with the necessary emotional fervor that carries political parties to victory. As a result, the Liberals have decided to return to the tired but still evocative rallying cry of national togetherness. Past experience shows it leaves neither individuals nor nations indifferent.

Once again, it appears a Canadian election is to be fought on the backs of Quebecers. Quebec's role is that, willingly or not rightly or wrongly it has been made the pivotal piece in the federalist structure. Without it the whole will not hold. The nation is to be united, behind Mr. Trudeau of course, because of the separatist threat.

The prominence of this theme raises ambiguities that go unresolved. How is it, one wonders, that urgent as this issue appears at election time, Mr. Trudeau, between elections, has consistently treated the Quebec independence movement as if it were a minor matter which malicious journalists have exaggerated beyond all proportion?

Can he really have it both ways? The separation of Quebec, he has said, is a hypothesis he will not consider seriously. This attitude seems to be shared, more or less, by all our party leaders. As if the spectre of separatism would disapper if only no one would talk about it. Yet at election time a total reversal of emphasis seems to occur. The threat from Quebec to national unity, or integrity, suddenly becomes relevant and dramatic.

Both positions — indifference and exaggerated dangers — mask the true nature of the self-determination movement and the implications it has for Quebecers and for the rest of Canada.

Between an arrogant dismissal of separatists, and the War Measures Act, there may well be other modes of action, closer to reality and more profitable. For it must be admitted that unity today seems even more distant than it did four years ago. The language of persuasion has been updated but the record of the past remains open to question.

In 1968, on the eve of the election, the Prime Minister's courageous stand during the St. Jean Baptiste celebrations seemed prophetic. The man who remained alone on the reviewing stand in the face of an angry mob, seemed chosen to bring this nation together. Most of the voters believed in the image even if they knew little about the man.

The intervening years have shown, however, that even for Quebecers who are only midly nationalist, centralized federalism does not become any more acceptable because it originates with a French-Canadian prime minister.

Four years after the 1968 election, the Quebec political debate continues with bitterness and passion. Even a most cautious evaluation would indicate that Mr. Trudeau's government has done very little to turn the debate in favor of the sort of rigid federalism it advocates. It has also contributed to the frustrations and disappointment of many moderate nationalists who as a result have found no alternative but to opt, reluctantly as it may be, for independence.

Privately and publicly the conversion to the separatist cause continued to grow. A recent survey in the newspaper La Presse showed that support for the Parti Quebecois among French-speaking voters almost equals that given to the Liberal party, 27.1 against 29.5.

Individual "celebrity" conversions occur at a steady rate. The most recent has been the public confession of Jean Paul Desbiens, former editor of La Presse, author of The Impertinences of Brother Anonymous and a major figure in the years of the Quiet Revolution. Writing in the magazine L'Action, he explains that he has finally settled the question that has obsessed him for some time and opted for independence.

Not only has the Trudeau regime not stopped separatism, but it has failed to develop better provincial-federal relations with Quebec in spite of the fact that the present Quebec government believes in federalism, and espouses the Liberal ideology.

Neither can the government's bilingual policy be called an unqualified success. It is generally admitted this policy has won few if any converts in Quebec. Instead, it seems to have evoked an anti-French backlash in some segments of English Canada.

Claude Castonguay, Quebec's minister of social affairs, referred recently to the misunderstandings bilinguali sm has encouraged rather than removed. He added that if diverted attention from such "real problems" as the division of power between Ottawa and Quebec, specifically in economic and social areas.

To some extent, perhaps, all reform measures are bound to be inadequate and all our political parties interchangeable in their inability to cope with the situation. Instead of changing our brand of government what may be required is a total re-examination of nationalism — Canadian or Quebecois — an inquiry into contemporary needs for decentralization, free from the fatalism of historical precedents.

The momentum behind the conflicts dividing Ottawa and Quebec may by now be so irreversible that no prime minister, let along Trudeau, can stop it. If we are indeed committed to "integrity," this possibility has to be discussed as part of the national debate.

Perhaps we might even get on with other issues, equally urgent to the welfare of Canada, but which at present tend to be overshadowed by the aura of sanctimony and evasion surrounding the issue of national unity.

English Canadians should also be told of the new unity within Quebec itself. Here, emerging trends indicate that traditional divisions are being at least temporarily set aside in the face of the new nationalism. As a result, English-French differences and conflicts are increasing rather than disappearing.

This shift of emphasis may be seen in gestures such as that of Pierre Vallieres who has set aside the Marxist class struggle to join the fight for Quebec independence through the Parti Quebecois.

Similarly, the militant Quebec unions, who in the last few months have come into sharp conflict with the Parti Quebecois for its middle-of-the-road socialism, have nevertheless underlined their support for the independence movement.

This unity within Quebec's French community, however temporary, is at the same time a formidable barrier against English-French understanding.

The slogan of national unity has only served to cover up reality. For all the lip service we pay to it, the subject of Quebec independence, and its real consequences, has remained taboo in English Canada.

If we are to take the new theme seriously, or for that matter Mr. Trudeau as its spokesman, we must expect a forthright attitude which will recognize past failures and all the misdirected efforts at unity. We must not allow ourselves to be blinded by ideals which have ignored the need for self-determination among French Canadians of all social classes.

Gas Chamber To Return?

By CHARLES FOLEY

LOS ANGELES — California voters appear likely to put the gas chamber back into business when they go to the polls on Nov. 7. More than one million citizens signed a petition earlier this summer to put the issue of capital punishment before the people on the November ballot; and, if the latest polls are correct, an overwhelming majority is in favour of restoration.

It is probable that the feeling in California reflects public sentiment throughout most of America. The U.S. Supreme Court's move to outlaw capital punishment last June almost certainly ran contrary to the popular will. Now a Mervin Field California Poll indicates that the death penalty is favored by 66 per cent of the public, with 24 per cent in opposition and 10 per cent undecided. Back in 1965, when moves to ban the penalty were getting under way, the figures were 51 per cent in favor and 35 per cent against.

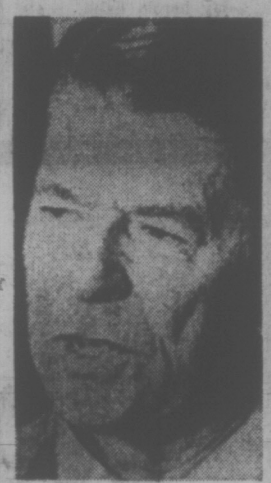
What has caused hundreds of thousands of people to change their minds? A murder rate that has increased by 155 per cent in the past decade, for one thing. More rapes, muggings and robberies. Skyjackings and their attendant publicity (Los Angeles Police chief Ed Davies has suggested public hangings at airports). And horrifying mass murders such as those committed by Charles Manson and his "tribe."

There is, too, a growing realisation of the fact that the average "lifer" usually earns his freedom on parole in less than 10 years. However strong the belief of Californians in rehabilitation may be, no-one wants to meet Charles Manson on a dark night. A powerful coalition of conservative forces has been hammering out these points with renewed force ever since the state's Supreme Court ruled last February that the death penalty violated the Constitution's ban on "cruel and unusual punishment."

From Governor Ronald Reagan downwards, state legislators and law enforcement officers are declaring their anger and dismay at the outlawing of the penalty, and their determination to reinstate it. Chief Davis is "ready to lead a nationwide campaign" to that end. The California Correctional Officers' Association is right behind him; and so, by and large, is the press.

An editorial in the Santa Monica Evening Outlook is typical: "People are sick and tired of seeing hardened criminals, convicted of premeditated murders of the most horrible kind, escape paying the ultimate penalty . . . If the death penalty deters the commission of a single such crime it is worth re-establishing."

The newspaper strikes another resonant note when it grumbles that the state Supreme Court "arrogantly stripped the people of their right to establish, through their elected representatives, the degree of punishment to be inflicted for different crimes."



REAGAN
. . . he wants it

This is very much the view of Governor Reagan who, with his wife Nancy, was one of the first to support the initiative drive to put Proposition 17, which calls for the restoration of all capital punishment statutes, on the ballot. Reagan's argument is the familiar one that the threat of the death penalty deters crime.

Could a vote in favor of the death penalty on Nov. 7 really bring the gas chamber back to California, perhaps even act as signal to other states? The legal experts differ on this. The state attorney-general's office says that the U.S. Supreme Court, in its decision, left the door open for states to impose the death penalty automatically for certain specified crimes, to be defined by state legislatures. Therefore, it left standing the public's right to fix, through their elected lawmakers, the penalties for crime.

But the ACLU's lawyers argue that the terms of the initiative, as presently phrased, will only reinstate capital punishment for a couple of obscure crimes for which no-one has ever been convicted.

JOBLESS 'FREELOADERS' HARDLY A HORDE

When "jobless freeloaders" emerge as the hottest issue of the election campaign, it's time for Canadians to recover their sense of proportion.

It's time to remember that there really are no jobs available for the vast majority of Canada's half-million unemployed; there's no way that 500,000 people out of work can be fitted into fewer than 50,000 vacant jobs. It follows that the vast majority of claims for unemployment insurance are legitimate.

It's time to reaffirm the principle that when our society fails to provide jobs for people, we owe them decent support until they can find work.

Canada's unemployment insurance scheme means that a worker who loses his job still has some money on which to live and support his famiily. He can collect two-thirds of his earnings, to a maximum of $100 a week, in benefits while he's looking for work.

If it were not for the unemployment insurance fund, supported partly by his own and his employer's contributions but also out of the taxes of all Canadians, that jobless worker would have to look to his municipal welfare department for help when his money ran out.

These facts must be kept in mind as the election campaign heats up on the issue of the high cost of unemployment insurance and the allegations that the cost is high (an expected $1.5 billion this year) because there are hordes of cheaters freeloading on the system.

That there are freeloaders is not in dispute — individuals have publicly admitted that they collected payments when not entitled to them and that they turned down jobs because it suited them not to work as long as they could collect benefits.

That there are "hordes" of cheaters is another matter. Studies by the Unemployment Insurance Commission show fraudulent claims are about 4 per cent of the total.

The government is right to crack down, and to crack down hard, on the cheaters. But the campaign against the cheaters, both within the government and out on the hustings, must not put the unemployment insurance scheme itself in jeopardy. It should be remembered, for instance, that the expected high total cost of unemployment insurance this year is not nearly so much because of cheaters but because the rate of unemployment has hovered in the 6 per cent range all year.

THE TORONTO STAR

There's been some criticism that benefits, increased in July, 1971, are now too high. Figures show that the average payment is not $100 a week, but $66 a week; not exactly a munificent sum for a family man to live on. In Metropolitan Toronto within the last year, the numbers of families on municipal welfare rolls have slowly decreased; officials say the availability of unemployment insurance is the main factor. In some smaller communities without Metro's financial resources, demands for welfare would bankrupt the administration if there weren't unemployment insurance for laid-off workers.

Instead of making unemployment insurance a whipping boy in the election campaign, aspiring MPs of all parties might better devote their energies to devising policies and programs to provide jobs for the unemployed.

The Case Against Camels

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

When I first read a newspaper report the other day headed Writer Riding Camel Hopes to Cross Sahara, I naturally assumed him to be some failed Canadian political reporter who was taking the easy way out.

After all, it is only 3,600 miles from the Atlantic coast to the Nile and in that entire stretch of real estate nobody is trying to get elected. Nobody is stretched out under a date palm living high off his unemployment insurance. There is no Save The Dunes committee. Corporate welfare bums are as scarce as ice-worms. Peer under any burnoose and you'll find a man who doesn't care whether his teeth are fixed by a dentist or a denturist. Sahara Hydro has an unblemished record of labor-management peace. Developers are unknown, whether for expressways, airports, or highrise apartment buildings, and there is no such thing as a reform alderman.

In fact, of course, all this irrefutable logic in favor of the Sahara traveller being a Canadian turned out to be false, upon reading the story further. The man, whose name is Geoffrey Moorehouse, is British. Therefore if I am to get a day's work out of his plight at all I will have to fall back on Plan B: why a camel? Why not a bicycle, or a horse?

To be fair, one good reason for riding a camel across the Sahara Desert is that it probably knows the way, which would not be the case with a bicycle. Although both bicycles and camels can go a long way without water, a camel is able to coast not only downhill, but uphill, and does not have to be pedalled at any time. (One might rule out a canoe for the same reason.)

Also, the seat on a camel is much wider than that on a bicycle. While this might not be a large factor in a ride of only a few blocks on city streets, I fear that a man who rode a 10-speed bicycle across the Sahara Desert would wind up rather deformed. At the end of 3,600 miles, his crotch might have been moved up so high in his body that he would have to undo his belt to blow his nose. On balance, then, I think we can see why this intrepid Briton chose a camel over a bicycle. But when one considers the virtues of a horse, the issue becomes much less clearcut.

A horse tires more easily than a camel over a long haul, but this is not all bad. It would be all very well to ride a camel up to an oasis in a cloud of sand and pull to a rearing halt before a Bobby Orr Pizza Place for lunch, but riding like that is really for the young, and Mr. Moorehouse is 40.

I am quite a bit more than 40, but if Mr. Moorehouse is at all like me he would count on his mount walking all the way. This is not necessarily a demeaning way to travel, and if one's vanity is hurt by always appearing to be riding too cautiously, Stephen Leacock once suggested a ploy that I have used and it does work. That is to ride at a walk with one's hand on the horse's rump, while peering steadily backward into the distance. By this means, the rider would indicate to curious tribesmen that he was going slow to allow 14 horsemen back in the distance somewhere a chance to catch up.

This could not be achieved so easily on a camel, because a desert is a challenge to a camel and it is always trying to get to the other side at a brisk trot. People who have tried the Leacock ploy on a camel report a high incidence of sprained wrists, which might blow the whole expedition.

No, I think the guy should take a horse. Any other questions?

Law 'Horns In' on Labor

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Much of the labor strife in British Columbia has been caused by lawyers and judges "horning in" on industrial disputes, the B.C. legislature was told Wednesday.

The statement came from B.C. Labor Federation researcher Colin Gablemann (NDP—North Vancouver-Seymour) in a debate which later saw passage of the government's bill to abolish the Mediation Commission.

The bill also restores power to the labor minister for search without warrant of working premises.

"You can't turn around without bumping into a lawyer and you can't turn around without bumping into a judge," Gablemann said.

Under the former government, he said, labor relations deteriorated because courts and lawyers "horned their way in" on negotiations between employees and employers.

The debate saw the defeat of two amendments from opposition members that would have had limited the search powers of the minister.

Gablemann described these powers as similar to those given a policeman who may stop a car on the road and make an inspection.

But in any case, Labor Minister William King repeated to the house an earlier statement that several other B.C. laws allow this kind of search, and several other Canadian provinces have similar legislation.

King said to not empower the minister in this way would "emasculate" the department.

One of the amendments, proposed by Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound), would have required court orders before such searches were carried out.

The other amendments, put forward by former labor minister James Chabot, (SC—Columbia River) would have allowed the courts access to information gathered by labor department officials, a practice the act does not allow.

Only the Social Credit party opposed third reading.

Expanded Cancer Services Planned for B.C.—Cocke

The NDP government has plans to expand significantly cancer services throughout the province, Health Minister Dennis Cocke announced Wednesday.

Cocke, with Peter Birks, president of the B.C. Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation, said the new program will be intended to make available to every person, family and community "the highest quality and the most effective diagnostic and treatment facilities."

Cocke said the new cancer program will aim at:

—Development of effective regional services;

—Co-ordination of strong and comprehensive research;

—A "vigorous" education program for members of cancer care teams;

—Establishment of a central registry system to keep records on cancer incidence in the province.

A committee to implement the program is being established under Dr. Donald H. Williams. Members will be Dr. C. F. Ballam, Dr. G. R. F. Elliot and Trenna Hunter from the provincial health department; Birks, Dr. J. M. W. Gibson and R. W. Underhill from the B.C. cancer body; Dr. D. F. Hardwick from the University of B.C.; Dr. D. F. Osborne from the B.C. Medical Association; E. F. Macdonald from the B.C. Hospitals Association, and K. A. Gardner from the Canadian Cancer Society.

The committee is expected to meet with agencies, institutions and organizations connected with cancer in the province.

In announcing the government's plans, Cocke released figures on cancer which show that one in four people in the province will likely develop cancer during their lifetime.

One out of six deaths each year is caused by cancer, with about 3,000 people dying each year from the disease.

Gov't Considering Tobacco Sign Ban

The provincial government agreed Wednesday to consider banning tobacco advertising on signs in public places as part of its general crackdown on tobacco promotion.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald adjourned debate on third reading of its Tobacco Products Act after an amendment proposing the sign ban was put forward by Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey).

The bill in its present form does not spell out specific restraints on advertising but empowers the government to make regulations to curtail it.

Macdonald disclosed some regulations that have been drafted which will require warnings about the health hazard of smoking.

The government's decision whether to allow Gardom's amendment in the bill may be known today if the legislation comes up again for house consideration.

Also given third reading in the house Wednesday was a bill enabling Speaker Gordon Dowding to conduct an inquiry into the legislative practices of the house.

GARDOM

UNANIMOUS CONSENT

There was unanimous consent given on the bill, but not before Liberals and Conservatives pushed to ensure they would be represented on the committee of inquiry Dowding appoints.

An amendment with that in mind was defeated by the combined forces of the NDP and Social Credit members.

Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett said his party would support the government because he had received Dowding's assurance that there would be proper representation on the committee.

But the two other opposition parties were not satisfied with assurances from the government side and sought to get representation written into the bill.

Liberal leader David Anderson said the intent of the amendment was to make the Speaker's committee work better.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said he was not questioning the impartiality of the Speaker, but said there was a difference between allowing opposition members to join the regular debate over the findings of the Speaker's committee and allowing them to actually sit on the committee themselves.

Premier Barrett said there would be ample opportunity for "ordinary members of the house" to discuss the Speaker's committee's recommendations when they are presented. He said he expects this to be before the spring session of the house.

Barrett also chastised the Social Credit members for failing to initiate any legislative reform during their 20-year term of office.

He said the Socreds are "so trained at behaving under a dictatorship that they don't know how to handle freedom when they get it."

"We want to make sure that this house won't suffer under the heavy hand of one-man rule, ever, ever, ever," Barrett said, pointing in the direction of Bennett.

"We want this house to work," he said, adding that no changes will come into effect without all MLAs being given a chance to discuss the legislation fully.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said the very debate the house was involved in is something he wanted to avoid.

"We don't want to see this bill politicized in any way whatsoever," he said.

Among other bills disposed of by the legislature were the amendments to the Public Schools Act which relax budget restrictions on local school boards budgeting.

The legislation also allows free collective bargaining between teachers and boards.

An amendment to the Land Registry Act which changes the job qualifications for registrars and deputy registrars was also finally passed.

Aother bill which lifts the ban on liquor advertising in publications was also passed.

Union Defection Steelmen's Issue

HAMILTON (CP) — Defection to a rival union of 1,800 employees of the Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd. smelter in Kitimat looms as a major issue in forthcoming elections for the two top Canadian offices of the United Steelworkers of America.

In a vote Sunday, the Aluminum Co. workers rejected the Steelworkers, their bargaining agent for 16 years, in favor of the Canadian Aluminum, Smelter and Allied Workers, an affiliate of the Council of Canadian Unions.

William Mahoney, facing his first serious challenge in more than a decade as Canadian director of the Steelworkers in the voting next February, is opposed by Don Montgomery, the union's Toronto-area supervisor.

The directorship of District 6, which stretches from the Ontario-Quebec border to the Pacific Coast, is being contested by Lynn Williams, the administration choice to succeed retiring director Larry Sefton, and Harry Greenwood, recording secretary of Local 1005.

All four candidates deplored the Kitimat vote which Mahoney described as a warning "of the growth of a new and insidious form of company unionism."

"The narrow nationalistic appeal of the so-called independent union is only a cover-up and camouflage to conceal the real aims of placing these workers in an indefensible position," he said.

Williams said the decision was not justified by the Steelworkers' performance as bargaining agent.

COLUMBIA PACT TO COST $647M

The latest estimate of the cost of the Columbia River Treaty to British Columbia has reached $647,576,312 the government disclosed Wednesday.

The information was in an answer to a question filed in the legislature.

To date, a total of $524,004,679 has been spent on the project and the final estimate of the cost of the treaty works is $1,116,101,000.

The United States share of the costs is $468,524,688, leaving B.C.'s share at $647,576,312.

Mother Gets Life

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — A 24-year-old mother of four who said she had attempted robbery to support her $45-a-day heroin habit, was sentenced to life imprisonment Tuesday after pleading guilty in the killing of two policemen during a gun battle at a shopping centre.

Alcohol, Speed Blamed in Deaths

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday that alcohol and excessive speed caused a two-car collision Sept. 13 that killed Olga Carpenter, 59, and Roger Joseph Morin, 28, both of Campbell River.

Two witnesses to the accident said Morin was speeding and on the wrong side of the road when his car collided with Mrs. Carpenter's car.

Young Liberals, Tories May Merge

OTTAWA (CP) — The Young Liberal and Young Progressive Conservative organizations are considering banding together for the remaining campaign days of Monday's election in an effort to get young people interested in voting, it was learned Wednesday.

Informed sources for both groups said the two youth organizations, which are supported financially by the parent parties, probably will announce the plan today in Toronto. That would give them three days to interest Canada's roughly three-million voters 18 to 24 years old in turning up at the polls.

Both informants said the New Democratic Party youth organization, which has an Ontario president but no national structure, also is interested in the plan. That group would be encouraged to join the other two.

The proposed joint effort is said to be the work of the presidents of the two old-line party youth groups—Bob Dundas of the Liberals and Len Domino of the Conserva-

Idea of the joint effort would be for youthful party workers to seek out the haunts of young people — pubs, campus meeting places, poolrooms and such — to talk to young people about the need to play a part in democracy's basic exercise.

No effort would be made to ram party policy or philosophy down the throats of the young voters.

Instead, members of both groups would talk to the young voters about democracy, the party system and the need to vote.

The proposal follows reports gathered in a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press that only about 1.5 million, or half the potential youth vote is expected by political organizers to vote.

Pollen Slams Bakery Sale As Costly to Consumers

Latest corporate deal to come under fire from Mayor Peter Pollen is the sale of McDonald's Bakery Ltd. to McGavin Toastmaster of Vancouver, which he described Wednesday as "one of the most retrogressive steps" ever to affect the Victoria consumer.

He said the sale of the local firm, announced earlier this week, should be challenged by the "dormant anti-combines commission in Ottawa."

That body, the mayor added, "doesn't seem interested in protecting the consumer at this level at all."

Pollen said surveys of comparative food prices in Vancouver and Victoria, conducted both by the Victoria Times and — on his instructions — by a member of his own staff, show that the only staple food item consistently lower in price here is bread.

There was no doubt that the main reason for this was the strong competition provided by "the extremely vigorous and well-run bread company run by John McDonald."

He said the move should be opposed not only by the federal agency but also, strongly, by the local press in their editorials and by politicians.

"I seem to be becoming a sort of local freedom fighter," he said. "It's a somewhat lonely job . . . but someone has to speak out."

Helicopter Pioneer, Sikorsky, Dies at 83

EASTON, Conn. (UPI) — Igor I. Sikorsky, a pioneer in the field of aviation and the founder of the helicopter manufacturing firm bearing his name, died of a heart attack today at his home here.

He was 83.

Born in Kiev, Russia, May 25, 1889, Sikorsky inherited a natural interest in contemporary science from his mother, who was a doctor, and his father, a psychology professor.

He once recalled how he built and flew model aircraft as a youth, using bamboo strips and tissue paper, and later accompanying his father to Germany where he heard of the Wright brothers' Kitty Hawk flight.

The revolution in the Soviet Union ended his promising career with the Russian czarist government, and Sikorsky came to the United States in 1919.

With the help of friends he formed in 1923 the Sikorsky Aero Engineering Corp., his first American aviation venture that produced the S-29-A, a successful twin-engine, all-metal transport.

In 1938, Sikorsky turned to the helicopter, using a seemingly endless stream of design sketches and handwritten ideas to improve on his vision of a unique aircraft.

COLLEGE SITE DELAY URGED

The Capital Regional Board will be asked Saturday not to take action on a committee recommendation on the location of the United World Colleges School of the Pacific.

Board chairman Hugh Curtis said Tuesday, "I intend to urge the full board to withhold any final action until the matter is fully reviewed with the representatives of the college."

Curtis was not present at last week's parks committee meeting, which recommended that 74 acres fronting Pedder Inlet in Metchosin not be sold by the federal government to the college but be leased, with a green strip 100 to 200 feet wide along the 3,000 feet of waterfrontage remaining in public ownership and in its natural state.

"I am convinced that ways can be found to satisfy both the shoreline needs of the college and the wider interests of the community," Curtis said.

Earlier, the school's headmaster, Jack Matthews, said if the two recommendations were followed by the federal government, the college will have to go elsehwere.

The school is in the process of acquiring the land from the government before starting a fund-raising campaign. Target date for opening is September, 1974.

95 Inmates Charged For Escaping

MATSQUI (CP) — R. V. Smith, head of the Matsqui police force, said in a report Wednesday that 95 inmates at the Federal Matsqui Institute were charged with 114 offences for escaping or being unlawfully at large during the last 22 months.

Smith said in his report to the Matsqui police commission that 89 inmates failed to return after being released on passes.

He added, however, that he was unable to learn the total number of inmates released on passes. He said the figure was not available from authorities at the institute.

Australian Contralto Elms Displays Dazzling Skills

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Rare indeed is the combination of a beautiful voice surpassing technical skill, great interpretive gifts and dramatic power. It is such a combination that has created the fabled artists of our and any other time.

These are the qualities that Australian contralto Lauris Elms possesses in full measure and spread before us richly at her Wednesday recital in McPherson Playhouse.

Among this season's Victoria Symphony offerings there are a number of goodies, but for those 300 or so persons who comprised her recital audience, Miss Elms is destined to remain the paramount experience.

This voice, ample and golden in tone from bottom to top of its more than two-octave range, is like a great Guaranarius cello — an immortal instrument needing only the mind and spirit of the artist to make its full beauty known.

It is Miss Elms' great fortune and ours that she is also possessor of these rare qualities.

The polished elegance of phrasing and style in songs of Mozart, the dazzling flexibility in the ornamented highly florid aria from Rossini's opera, Itallan Girl in Algiers, the suppleness and subtleness of color and texture throughout her performance of the Berlioz and Debussy cycles, were accomplished singing of the highest order.

And more than this, there is her ability to evoke mood, to touch the hearts of her listeners. She may sing in any language and she will be understood so clearly and poignantly does she convey emotion.

Winifred Scott was at the piano throughout and too much cannot be said for the perfection of this partnership.

Complete rapport existed between singer and pianist and Miss Scott's sensitivity, her lucent tone, fluency and firmness in shaping and rhythmic vitality were, as always, admirable.

Two outstanding artists met here — one a resident of Victoria the other making her North American debut in this city. This was surely a measure of the direction in which, musically, we are trending.

Safety Dispute Hits Two Ports

Longshoremen in Nanaimo and at Harmac pulp mill dock refused this morning to operate fork-lift trucks for the second day in a dispute over safety.

A spokesman for the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union said the men refuse to work the small fork lifts in the holds of three ships because the cab cover is not bolted in place.

The union said the next move is up to employers, but Ed Strang, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, said the fork lifts are not unsafe and are "exactly the same as those that have been used for the past several years."

Jim Irvine, secretary of Chemainus area Local 508 of the ILWU, said the union has been asking for bolts to be installed but this has been refused.

He said stevedoring companies "won't even talk to us" about the 35-cent bolts.

Three weeks ago, he said, a load fell on an unbolted cab cover in Nanaimo and the driver was injured and off work for three weeks.

"If it had been a heavy load, he'd be dead," Irvine said.

Schools Won't Be Charged

The government does not intend to charge school boards in next year's budgets for any special funds they receive this year, Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Wednesday in the legislature.

She made the statement after questions were asked about a press release issued earlier by the minister inviting school boards to make a case for emergency funds.

"There is certainly no intention of putting these on a board's budget for next year," Dailly said.

POLICE FIRING APPEALED

The Saanich police union has been joined by the B.C. Federation of Peace Officers in appealing a B.C. Supreme Court ruling relating to the dismissal of a Saanich officer.

The case involves firing of Const. John Merrifield by the Saanich police commission last June 26. Two days later the commission sent the officer a letter notifying him of his dismissal.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton last week ruled that under the Municipal Act the dismissal was legal because policemen hold office at the pleasure of the police commission.

Federation president Frazer MacDonald said Wednesday the federation felt it should support the appeal because the job security of policemen across B.C. and possibly across Canada was involved.

Nanaimo Park Advances

NANAIMO — A major recreational complex planned for the district has moved ahead a notch with the agreement of city council and the regional district board on a purchase price for Exhibition Park.

The regional district will buy the 116-acre park from the city for the appraised price of $260,000, regional board chairman Don Beaton and Mayor Frank Ney announced Wednesday.

The sale now hinges on a recreational facility referendum planned for early 1973.

"It has been a long and frustrating job," said regional director Ada Howden of Wellington, chairman of the Patterns for Living committee. "But finally we have a solid proposition to place before the board and early next year, the people."

Carr Home Restoration Delay Hit

Brian Small, manager of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, was replying to an allegation that slow handling of correspondence is responsible for the slow progress of refurbishing the home at 207 Government as a national historic site.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce is the prime mover and shares rehabilitation costs with the National Historic Sites branch of the department of northern development and Indian affairs.

A total $65,000 has been spent, of which $25,000 came from the federal government. It is estimated another $22,450 is required to complete the job, including $2,450 for a fire detection-alarm system recommended by an architect from the branch who inspected the house during the summer.

Although sites branch assistant director Peter Bennett wrote to Small Aug. 15 asking for confirmation of estimates, and the letter did not reach Jaycee Emily Carr committee chairman Charles Loveless until last week, Small said contents of the letter were relayed to Loveless immediately the letter was received.

Small also said the inspecting architect was more than a year late, having been expected in July 1971.

(Referring to School Board administration)

". . . Allan McKinnon pointed out that administration salaries had been something like 78 per cent higher than previous years. 'This in my mind goes down as empire building,' said McKinnon. 'This has gone as far as we . . . can let it go'."

"EMPIRE BUILDING"
". . . one trustee raised a vital question. He called the proliferation of activities empire-building. The protesting trustee, Mr. Allan McKinnon, refers to a reorganization proposal . . . as the straw that broke the camel's back. Earlier, he had challenged other cost-escalating reorganizations . . . The property owners should be interested. It's their money that meets the bills."

3.
(Following Mr. McKinnon's election as Chairman of the School Board)

". . . Mr. McKinnon, then, represents the application of a stronger hand on spending, and a stronger assertion of board member's responsibility for policy making . . . As Chairman he will now have an opportunity to implement his ideas and prove the validity of his earlier criticism. Taxpayers will be particularly interested in the outcome."

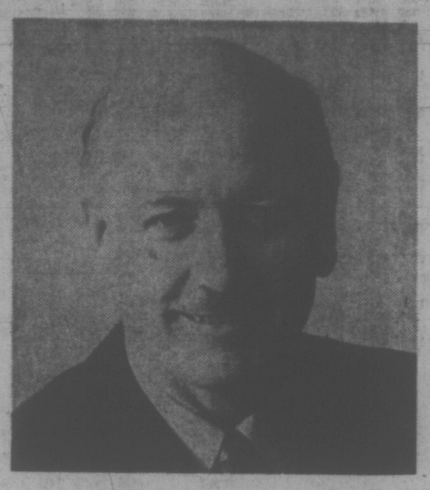
"TRIMMING OFF THE FAT"
". . . the consultants point out that reductions . . . have taken place . . . over the past twelve months . . . In all, some 22 positions previously filled are now vacant, with an annual reduction in direct salaries of approximately $250,000.00.
". . . the consultants add that . . . "we have concluded that the present complement of the District Administration, taking into account the staff reduction already made, is appropriate for the functions it must discharge." "



. . . keeps his word

ALLAN McKINNON
A man of his word!

He has served this City well for several years.

KEEP HIM AT IT!

NO VOTER CAN DO BETTER THAN ELECT A MAN WHO OBTAINS RESULTS, IS DEVOTED TO PUBLIC RATHER THAN SELF SERVICE, AND IS A MAN OF ACTION, NOT PLATITUDES.

Listen closely to all you hear from Plymouth. We've found new ways to keep it quiet.

For 1973, Plymouth is quieter than ever before. Satellite's front and rear suspension systems, for instance, have been isolated from the Unibody with rubber pads. This stops most of the road shock and noise from travelling through to the body of the car. Plymouth's Unibody construction helps too. Its one-piece welded strength stays tight and quiet for years. Inside, quiet surrounds you. Passenger compartments have been insulated from bumper to bumper. Outside, we've lowered noise levels too, by designing new air intake and exhaust systems.

As well as being the quietest Satellite ever, this year it's the smoothest running Satellite. Electronic Ignition eliminates the breaker points and condenser so it's virtually maintenance free. You'll go further between tuneups, and your exhaust will stay cleaner longer. Electronic Ignition is standard on every North American built Plymouth this year.

Satellite's 2-door hardtop may look like a sporty personal car, but its size and features make it enough car for most families—and all their luggage. Its 115 inch wheel base is easy to handle, and easy to park. A 318 V8 delivers plenty of power, with remarkable gas economy. There's also a money-saver 225 slant Six available. See the quiet, new 1973 Satellite at your Plymouth dealers now!

Extra care in engineering . . . it makes the difference.

Strait Search Ends For Oil Drill Sites

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Chevron Standard Ltd. of Calgary has completed its seismic search for potential oil drilling sites in Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Today it is moving its leased vessel, Canadian Olympic, to the open Pacific to explore oil lease territory off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Chevron Standard is mapping strategic areas for future drilling.

The Canadian Olympic spent one week in the strait, towing a 2,400-meter streamer at a depth of about 50 feet.

The company is exploring under a farm-out agreement with Shell Canada Ltd. which holds federal permits on 13.7 million acres off the west coast of the Island and in the strait.

Shell Canada drilled 14 dry holes in the area before abandoning the project in 1969. Shell holds the largest area in oil exploration permits issued for the west coast.

The Canadian Olympic met strong winds and rough water in the strait during the final two days of its testing program and even rougher weather is expected on the open ocean.

At last contact, the ship was heading in a northwestern direction off the coast north of Port Renfrew.

Seismic exploration is expected to continue through November, depending upon weather conditions.

Work halts completely in rough weather and exploration becomes too expensive to be viable when more hours are spent in waiting than in exploring.

Even with ideal weather conditions, exploration is not expected to be carried on much beyond the end of November.

Other major companies holding permits are Pan American Petroleum with 2.8 million acres and Gulf Oil with one million acres.

Permits in the Juan de Fuca Strait and on the west coast are still valid but permits granted for Georgia Strait were subsequently cancelled.

Canadian Breweries Will Drop Dividend

TORONTO (CP) —For the first time since 1945, Canadian Breweries Ltd. of Toronto will not pay a quarterly dividend on common shares, usually payable Jan. 1. The dividend has been about 10 cents a share in recent years.

At the company's annual meeting Wednesday, chairman John Devlin reported preliminary figures for the first quarter of the current fiscal year ended June 30 showed profit of $2.5 million or nine cents a share, compared with $3 million or 11 cents a share in the corresponding quarter last year.

The money saved by not paying the dividend will be applied to obtaining a better share of the market in both Canada and the United States, a move the company feels is its first priority, he said.

The company's shares closed at $6.25 Wednesday, down $1, on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The move to drop the dividend was a risky one, said Wilmat Tennyson, company president. He said the firm took the risk to offset recent declines, particularly in the U.S. market.

In the United States, Carling Brewery Co. Inc., a wholly-owned Canadian Breweries year ended June 30. It sales were $148,253,000, down 11.3 subsidiary, lost $774,000 in the per cent from $167,167,000 a year earlier.

NO HANGOVER EXPECTED

LOS ANGLES (AP) — If the burlgars who broke into the International School of Bartending were expecting a high time, they were disappointed.

The place was full of liquor bottles — containing colored water — and money — "play" money used in training.

The disgruntled burglars smashed about 60 bottles and scattered the money over the floor before leaving, investigators reported Monday. Officers said the burglars did escape with about $2,000 worth of office and movie equipment.

$ EXCHANGE

VICTORIA — Purchase of U.S. funds in terms of Canadian dollar, was quoted today by the Royal Bank at $0.97¾ for cheques, .97⅛ for cash and .96⅝ for silver. Selling rates were $0.98¼ for cheques and .98⅞ for cash.

NOON PRICES

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds at noon today unchanged at $0.98 3/16. Pound sterling down 1⅛ at $2.30⅜.

NEW YORK (CP)—Canadian dollar at noon down 1/64 at $1.01 27/32 in terms of U.S. funds. Pound sterling down 1 49/64 at $2.34 9/16.

Goodyear

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. of Canada Ltd. reports consolidated net income for the nine months ended Sept. 30 of $6,594,000 or $25.03 a share compared with $4,875,000 and $18.33 a share in the corresponding period of 1971.

Consolidated net sales for the nine-month period rose to $152,215,000 from $133,309,000 last year.

Placer

Placer Development Ltd. of Vancouver reports net earnings of $10,635,000 or $1.78 a share for the first nine months of 1972, compared with $4,050,000 or 68 cents a share for the same period last year. Increase in net earnings reflects reduced income taxes, increased earnings from other affiliated companies and revenue from the sale of options on share of Marcopper Mining Corp.

Murphy Oil

Murphy Oil Corp. reports net income for the third quarter of 1972 was more than $3.9 million, an increase of $1.1 million over same period one year ago.

In the third quarter of 1971, earnings were nearly $2.8 million, or 47 cents a share.

For the nine months ending Sept. 30, earnings totalled more than $9.3 million, or $1.59 a share, compared to $7.75 million or $1.42 a share for the same period in 1971.

W. Coast Petroleum

Westcoast Petroleum Ltd. earned $2,472,000 or 61 cents a share in the first nine months this year, up from $1,653,000 or 41 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

Before deducting dividend payments on the outstanding preferred shares, earnings were $3,979,000 compared with $3,102,000.

Interprovincial

Interprovincial Pipe Line Co. reports consolidated net income for the nine months ended Sept. 30 of $28.9 million or $1.13 a share, up from $25.9 million and $1.02 in the corresponding period of 1971.

Deliveries of crude oil and natural gas liquids averaged 1,078,000 barrels a day in the nine-month period compared with 960,000 barrels a day in the same period a year ago.

RECORD SALES FOR WELDWOOD

VANCOUVER (CP) — Weldwood of Canada Ltd. today reported record sales of $136.9 million and substantially-increased earnings for the first nine months of the year.

Sales for the same period of 1971 were $108.3 million. Net income for the first three quarters of 1972 was $5,348,000 or $1 a share, compared with $2,027,000 and 51 cents a share last year.

Weldwood president Gordon Bowell said third-quarter figures were down from the second quarter because of loss of almost a month's production from West Coast mills due to an industry-wide strike that lasted until mid-July.

He said the Cariboo Pulp and Paper Co. mill at Quesnel owned jointly by Weldwood and Daishowa-Marubeni International Ltd. — will start producing bleached kraft pulp Dec. 1. The company's exterior flakeboard plant at Longlac, Ont. now under construction at a cost of $8 million, will be operating by December, 1973, Bowell said.

'Never Have Magazines Been as Profitable'

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian magazine industry is booming and "never in the 20th century have magazines been as profitable," the president of The Reader's Digest Association (Canada) Ltd., said Wednesday.

Paul Zimmerman, at a news conference before the firm's annual meeting, said the boom is the result of the reader's "need for concise and accurate information concerning the complex world in which they live."

"Since good magazines have been fulfilling this challenge from their readers, their reader audience values have steadily increased."

He said the industry's health is reflected in Reader's Digest's steadily increasing revenues and profits in recent years.

Since 1971, the company's shares on the Montreal Stock Exchange have risen from $8 to $30 at the close Wednesday.

The company, which publishes The Reader's Digest and the French-language Selection du Reader's Digest, reported net income of $1.5 million for the year ended June 30, up from $826,000 a year earlier.

PROFITS UP

For the latest first quarter ended Sept. 30 net profit was $449,000 or 55 cents a share compared with $300,000 or 32 cents a share for the similar period last year, an increase of 76 per cent.

Zimmerman said Canadian publishers no longer oppose the protected tax position of Reader's Digest, which is American controlled.

Since 1965, the Canadian editions of Reader's Digest and Time magazine are considered Canadian publications and advertisers are allowed to charge advertising as a business expense.

Publishers originally protested the tax law, but "the magazine industry in Canada has since reversed its position," Zimmerman said.

The publishers now agree that "without Reader's Digest and Time there would not be enough ads in Canada to ensure their survival."

The two United States publications provide an advertising base, he said.

Canada, U.S. Seek European Finances

MONTREAL (CP) — Some of the top American and Canadian financial and industrial leaders will take part in a conference in London next month with the aim of attracting more European investment to North America.

About 1,000 European banking and investment executives are expected to attend the three-day gathering—called the European Institutional Investor Conference—which opens Nov. 28.

The first two days of the meeting will be sponsored by the Institutional Investor Systems Inc. of New York while the final day's sessions are being organized by the General Council of Industry of Quebec.

The council consists of leading businessmen from Quebec and serves as an advisory body to the Quebec government.

The team of Canadian and American business and financial experts will discuss potential areas of investment in natural resource areas as well as in industry.

Under the theme of the opportunity of North America, the first two days will be devoted to the United States, with the third day to Canadian affairs, involving a series of symposiums organized by the council.

The Canadian delegation will be headed by Paul Ouimet, president and director general of the council.

Court Told Ore May Not Be Used

VANCOUVER (CP) — Decision has been served by Mr. Justice Thomas Berger at the conclusion of a two-month-long British Columbia Supreme Court trial over rights in the operation of Afton Mines Ltd.

The court was told in the final day of the trial that the Afton copper ore body near Kamloops may never be developed into a mine.

John C. Bouck, acting for Canadian Exploration Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Placer Development Ltd. of Vancouver, made these comments in his closing argument.

Vancouver-based Teck Corp. Ltd. is seeking to set aside an exploration and development agreement signed by Afton directors with the Placer unit.

Bouck said that even though a great amount of ore has been found on the Afton property it is too early to say that a mine will be developed.

He said a report by a Placer engineering official indicates that the present proven ore reserves on the Afton property are no greater than 15 million tons.

Ottawa Aids Cushion Craft Development

GRAND BEND, Ont. (CP) — General manager James Dekker of Bell Aerospace Canada Ltd. said Monday night the federal government, in conjunction with his company, is going to spend $2 million developing a new 20-ton air-cushion vehicle.

He said it will have a 5½-ton payload and be used in coast guard search and rescue operations. Research would begin immediately and construction of the first prototype should be completed late next year.

Stranded Tourists To Fly

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nine vacationing Vancouver-area old age pensioners, stranded in London since Friday when their charter flight was cancelled, will be home in time to vote in Monday's federal election.

George Hartwig, manager of Adventurers Travelaide Ltd. of Vancouver, which booked the passengers, said Wednesday arrangements have been made to have all nine flown to Seattle on Friday, and then bused to Vancouver.

Earlier plans were to return three of the travellers on Friday and the rest on Nov. 10.

Peter Clarke, reservations manager for Trafalgar tours of London, confirmed in a telephone interview that he had received the tickets for the nine travellers from the Vancouver firm.

A spokesman at the Canadian High Commission in London said the pensioners had "no financial problems at all and are quite comfortable." He added that some of them were concerned that they might not be back home soon enough to vote in the federal election.

TORONTO (CP) — Trainer Carl Chapman says he will accept an invitation to enter Bea Latimer's filly Belle Geste in the $150,000 Washington International Nov. 11.

Pony Express Challenges Post

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Pony Express, abandoned 111 years ago this month as a failure, will be revived next Monday "in an effort to speed up mail service."

The spoof of the U.S. postal service is the work of James H. Boren, former state department employee who now is promoter of the National Association of Professional Bureaucrat (NATAPROBU).

Boren and five others will ride horses from Philadelphia to Washington in a one-time effort to prove that "not only will the NATAPROBU pony express beat the regular mail, but it will also bring back fond memories of the days when the postal system used to work."

Boren, who lives in Alexandria, Va., and partner, plan to pickup a dozen letters in various mail boxes through out the city of brotherly love and then race them to Washington.

"We plan to arrive in Washington about noon on Tuesday," said Peter Gamble, Boren's Philadelphia partner who is NATAPROBU's orchestrator of communication interfacing. "We could do it more rapidly," added Boren, "but we're in no hurry. We'll have plenty of time."

The jet-age postal service already has lost one "race" to a four-legged animal recently. Mail was carried by ox cart from Ellsworth to Surry, Maine, a distance of seven miles, in three hours and seven minutes, while the postal service required 23 hours to make the trip. That contest was sponsored by a newspaper in Ellsworth.

Boren said the decision to criticize mail service "presented a philosophical dilemma" to his organization, which normally believes that "orchestrated delay is desirable." But mail service has become so bad that "an adjustment of our position was necessary.

"Dedicated finger-tappers in this citadel of non-responsiveness are having their flow of paper disrupted" by the slowness of mail "and their shufflistic endeavors are a national right of all bureaucrats," Boren mumbled at a press conference. NATAPROBU's motto is: when in doubt, mumble.)

In a rare display of seriousness, Boren said NATAPROBU aims to call attention, with satire, "to the waste of human resources."

As far as Monday's race, Louis Eberhardt, postal service public information officer, said, "it should be next-day service" between Washington and Philadelphia.

Then Eberhardt added: "It (mail services) irritates me, too, sometimes. I got a letter from my mother last week that took eight days to get here from St. Louis."

National Trust's Deferred Profit Sharing Plan and Registered Retirement Savings Plans for small businesses and executive groups.

The new Income Tax Act provides unusual opportunities for employers and employees alike to obtain maximum tax advantages. And a combination of National Trust's Deferred Profit Sharing Plan, operated by the employer, and voluntary Registered Retirement Savings Plans, paid for by employees, can mean total tax exempt contributions up to $6,500 annually per employee.

Incentive to work

With National Trust's deferred profit sharing plan there is also a strong incentive to work. Work for better performance and better profits, because it ensures that employees have a stake in both. And contributions can be directly related to the profit performance of the business.

How the 'combined' plans work

The deferred profit sharing plan provides for the accumulation and investment of employer contributions on the employee's behalf. At the same time, the employee can voluntarily supplement his employer benefits by participating in a Registered Retirement Savings Plan.

A flexible programme

The deferred profit sharing plan is a sensible alternative to employee pension arrangements for small businesses. With the National Trust Plan the employer determines who is to participate as well as the method of allocating contributions. The contribution amounts can be determined from year to year at the discretion of the company or may be geared to a formula setting out the percentage of profits to be allocated. Similarly, the employee can determine the amount he wishes to contribute to his RRSP.

Tax advantages

All employer plan contributions, investment gains and earnings of the trust fund are tax exempt, the employee being taxed on amounts withdrawn. And, at the time of withdrawal, the employee has important options available which may include tax free transfers to his Registered Retirement Savings Plan.

Professional management and total administration

National Trust provides professional investment management of the deferred profit sharing trust fund through participation in its 'pooled' stock, bond and mortgage funds which show an impressive record of investment performance. The plans are handled in every phase by experienced and expert administrative staff. The reporting and accounting phases are automatically taken care of, which relieves the businessman of day-to-day handling. At the same time, National provides the administrative facilities for the employees' own registered retirement savings plans.

Tax advantages for all is just one of the benefits. National Trust's Deferred Profit Sharing Plan in combination with a Registered Retirement Savings Plan represent an excellent way to contribute to an employee's future security while providing strong motivation for work performance and employee interest.

Rod Keeps Busy As Rangers Climb

By The Canadian Press

The fact that New York Rangers aren't tearing the National Hockey League's East Division standings apart can't be blamed on winger Rod Gilbert.

The Rangers, expected to supplant Boston Bruins atop the East after escaping almost untouched by the rival World Hockey Association's raid, finally showed signs of emerging Wednesday night with a 6-1 rout of Philadelphia Flyers.

It gave the Rangers their fifth win in nine games but with a tie they are still in fourth place behind the NHL's only undefeated teams—Buffalo Sabres, Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings.

Gilbert, the 31-year-old veteran of 11 Ranger seasons, hasn't been idle. The Montreal native collected two goals, his sixth and seventh of the season, for a career total of 251.

He became only the third Ranger ever to reach the 250-goal mark and still trails Andy Bathgate's 272 and Camille Henry, with 256.

Elsewhere Wednesday, Buffalo continued unbeaten with two second period goals to salvage a 2-2 tie with Boston, Toronto Maple Leafs blew a 3-1 lead but escaped with a 4-3 win over Minnesota North Stars, and Atlanta Flames edged California Golden Seals 4-3.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

Gilbert, who also picked up an assist on linemate Vic Hadfield's second period score, is ahead of his early-season pace a year ago when he wound up with his best ever year—43 goals 54 assists and 97 points.

The Rangers contained the Flyers to such a degree, New York goaltender Gilles Villemure faced only 19 shots, including Gary Dernhoefer's shot that escaped him early in the third period to ruin his shutout.

Flyers' goalie, Bob Taylor, was on the receiving end of 49 Ranger shots including 17 in each of the first two periods.

The Sabres, who pulled into a first-place tie with Montreal on the strength of their third tie of the season, trailed 2-0 after the first period and lost veteran goalie Roger Crozier between periods with an injured back.

But Buffalo's Flying Frenchmen, Gil Perreault, Rick Martin and Rene Robert, continued their hot streak when Robert scored his fifth of the season. It gave the line 20 of Buffalo's 32 goals and stretched Perreault's point string to eight games.

Perreault leads the NHL scoring race with 20 points and Martin in goals with nine. But it was veteran captain Gerry Meehan's first goal of the year 31 seconds after Robert's score that produced the tie and Dave Dryden, replacing Crozier, held Boston scoreless.

Pierre Jarry and Dave Keon scored third-period goals at Minneapolis to produce the Toronto victory and send the Leafs into a sixth-place tie in the East with Boston and Vancouver Canucks.

The North Stars got all three goals against rookie goaltender Ron Low, who replaced Jacques Plante when the 43-year-old veteran injured his glove hand stopping a shot early in the second period with the Leafs up 1-0. Plante apparently has a broken little finger.

SLIDING DEFENCEMAN Bill Plager of Atlanta Flames smothers shot by California's Stan Gilbertson during National Hockey League game in Oakland. Goalie Dan Bouchard drops to ice to protect nets in case puck eludes Plager while defenceman Ivan Boldirev moves in at right. Flames seared Seals 4-3. Olympic Ref Backs Cage Protest by U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — United States Olympic officials are assembling a massive protest against Russia's controversial basketball victory at the Munich Games, but admit chances are slim of overturning the gold medal result.

"History is against us," Arthur Lentz, executive-director of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said today, "but we hope to prove a point for the good of future competition."

The protest is to be ruled upon by the International Olympic Committee's executive committee.

The Russians got a disputed extra chance to score in the closing seconds of the basketball final at Munich and scored at the final buzzer for a 51-50 victory.

U.S. WRONGED

However, the United States claims it was wronged and that the game should have ended with the Americans taking a 50-49 verdict for their ninth straight Olympic title.

"We have depositions from four officials who worked at the scorer's table," said Lentz, "and each one backs our claims.

"Now, the referee says Russia should not have been given that chance to win."

Renato Righetto of Sao Paulo, Brazil, the referee, said in a statement prepared for the U.S. Olympic dossier that Russia's triumph was "completely irregular and outside the rules."

Righetto blamed the setting back of the time clock to three seconds on William Jones, secretary of the International Amateur Basketball Federation (FIBA).

"We are pleased the Brazilian referee is keeping his verbal promise made to my staff at Munich," Lentz said at his New York office. "I admire him for having the courage to stand up to FIBA."

Lentz claimed FIBA and its full-time administrator, Jones, should be suspended from such activity until it is proven that "all nations are getting a fair shake."

Lentz said the FIBA and Jones, an Englishman, tried to "wear down the favored Americans" in the 1971 Pan Am Games in Cali, Colombia, by putting the best three teams in the bracket.

Blazers Appeared Able Until Bernie Left Scene

Derek Sanderson, John McKenzie and Bernie Parent should be enough potential for any fledgling World Hockey Association team to make a success of its inaugural season.

Apparently it isn't.

McKenzie, Philadelphia Blazers' player-coach, has been sidelined with injuries suffered in a pre-season game; Sanderson has been conspicuous by his absence anywhere but the penalty column, and Parent has been the victim of an anemic offence.

The Blazers had it all together for one period Wednesday night before Parent was removed with an ankle injury and the red-hot Cleveland Crusaders jumped on veteran Marcel Paille en route to an 8-2 victory.

Three games are set for tonight with New England Whalers visiting New York Raiders, the Nationals at Houston Aeros and Quebec Les Nordiques entertaining Minnesota's Fighting Saints.

It was a 2-2 game at Philadelphia, the Blazers finally getting their home opener at the Convention Hall after two earlier attempts were postponed because of poor ice conditions.

Parent was removed to start the second period and sent to hospital for precautionary xrays to the ankle injured on the first Cleveland shot of the game.

The Crusaders ripped four unanswered goals past Paille in the second period before 5,075 Blazer fans. Ted Hodgson, with the second of his three goals started the blitz at 6:56 and was followed by Grant Erickson, Paul Andrea and Gerry Pinder.

Goals by Hodgson and Ray Clearwater offset 1-0 and 2-1 leads built by Philadelphia's Don Burgess and Bryan Campbell. The Crusaders, supported by goaltender Gerry Cheevers 19 saves, completed the rout with third period goals from Hodgson and Pinder.

Two former Toronto Maple Leafs—Wayne Carleton and Guy Trottier—contributed two goals each to Ottawa's fourth consecutive victory. It shot the Nationals into a tie for third place with Les Nordiques of Quebec, who were idle.

ST. LOUIS GROUP TALKING WITH ALS

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette today joined La Presse in speculating that Sam Berger is about to unload the floundering Montreal Alouettes franchise to U.S. interests.

But the Montreal owner spent much of Wednesday denying the reports as "speculation only" and added that "no one had made me an offer, concrete or otherwise."

La Presse reported Wednesday that Berger, who purchased the Canadian Football League franchise for a reported $1.2 million in December, 1969, was ready to sell the team to someone already involved in professional hockey and basketball.

The newspaper speculated that Robert E. Schmertz, a New York millionaire involved in the ownership of Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association and New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association, could fill these qualifications.

The Gazette, however, speculates that Sidney Salomon II, owner of the St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League and a Montreal group headed by attorney David Schatia, might buy the club and turn it back over to Red O'Quinn, fired earlier this season from the Alouettes' general-manager position.

PROVINCE-WIDE LOTTERY TO AID SCHOOL SPORTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of School Athletic Associations has launched a province-wide lottery to raise money for school sports.

The lottery known as the School Sports Draw, is licensed by the government and has been approved by the B.C. Principals and Vice-Principals Association, the B.C. School Trustees Association and B.C. School District Superintendents.

A spokesman for the sponsors said Wednesday that 50 per cent of the proceeds will go to particpating schools directly for extra-curricular sports and other school activities. The remaining funds to be held in trust to assist high school sports development programs, clinics and travel to provincial championships.

The draw winner will receive $5,000, the maximum allowable under the B.C. Lotteries Act.

Playoffs Are Still On; Regals Delay Decision

Jack Adams, president of Victoria Regals and a director of the currently embattled Premier Soccer League, said this morning that as far as the league was concerned, the playoffs are still on.

"Everything's ready to go," he said.

"This week, the B.C. Soccer Commission formally announced that all players who took part in the playoff semi-final between Croatia and Columbus last Sunday in Vancouver are suspended for one year.

Despite this, PSL officials in Vancouver have said the second leg of the two-game, total-goal series will be played Saturday at Swangard Stadium. Columbus won the opener, 4-1.

And the same officials said the opening game of the Regals-Vancouver Spartans semi-final will go ahead as scheduled Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

But Adams, who has several times expressed a desire not to endanger the players through suspension, said that something will have to be decided soon for the sake of the public.

"Today we'll have to decide one way or the other."

The league apparently is still hoping for a ruling from the Canadian Soccer Association — either lifting the commission ban on the PSL or allowing the league to complete it's season.

Meanwhile, according to reports from several Regal players the match has nearly no chance at all of coming about, at least under present circumstances.

They aren't about to jeopardize their futures by defying the commission suspension.

To further cloud the issue, the winter-time Pacific Coast Soccer League plans to go ahead with its schedule this weekend.

Both Victoria West-United and Victoria Gorge are slated to play Sunday and each club has signed enough players to operate despite missing several key men now signed by Regals.

Gorge will play North Shore on the Mainland and West-United will tackle University of British Columbia Thunderbirds at 2 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

Rugby Split

Mount Newton and visiting Royal Oak split a pair of junior high school rugby matches Wednesday. The home school won the first-team match, 11-3, but Royal Oak won the seconds' encounter, 10-0.

Cavaliers Foil Comeback To Crack Losing Streak

Philadelphia '76ers wanted to break their six-game losing streak, but Cleveland Cavaliers, with a seven-game losing streak of their own, had other ideas.

Cleveland, in last place in the National Basketball Association Central Division, had to stave off a comeback by the '76ers for a 113-108 victory, their first of the season.

The '76ers, in last place in the Atlantic Division, fought back from a 101-88 score to pull within three points at 109-106, but Austin Carr, who finished the game with 35 points, scored the Cavaliers' last four to beat winless Philadelphia.

Fred Carter led the 76ers with 29 points while Lenny Wilkens had 25 for the Cavaliers.

In other NBA games, Milwaukee Bucks beat Buffalo Braves 109-92, Baltimore Bullets whipped Detroit Pistons 115-109, Los Angeles Lakers topped Houston Rockets 112-107 and Atlanta Falcons edged Seattle Super Sonics 118-115.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Mickey Davis led a Milwaukee comeback. The Bucks had led by 14 points at the half but trailed 74-73 in the third quarter. Jabbar scored a total of 25 points in the game while Davis hit six in the crucial surge. Rookie Bob McAdoo hit 16 for Buffalo.

Fast-Finishing Clippers Sail Home With a Victory

NANAIMO — Nanaimo Clippers started slowly but finished with a flair Wednesday while defeating Chilliwack Bruins 7-3 in a Coast Division game of the B.C. Junior Hockey League.

Clippers were down a goal after only 18 seconds of play but came back to take a 2-1 lead going into the second period and expanded the margin to 5-1 after 40 minutes

Ron Poole and Brad Richardson scored two goals each to pace Nanaimo while singles were added by Bill Bestwick, Lindsay Thomson and Bruce Van Camp.

In statistics released Wednesday but not including the Nanaimo-Chilliwack game, players from Penticton Broncos dominate the individual scoring parade.

Grayling Snap Up Flies In Crystal-Clear Waters

Here is the third column in a series on hunting and fishing along the Alaska Highway:

The main goal of our trip was a trophy Stone sheep, but after a grayling fishing experiences of the previous year, my partner and I promised ourselves one full day fishing on the clear waters of the Tetse River.

From mile "0" at Dawson Creek, the highway winds through the rolling Peace River country almost barren of any lakes or streams for fishing. Near pavement's end at mile "80" the highway then follows the crests of ridges to avoid the muskeg. A very limited number of streams are visible but not readily accessible. It is not until the traveller reaches mile "370," the floodplain valley of the Tetse River, that he has his first real introduction to the cool, clear mountain streams of the north. Fishing action on the Tetse more than makes up for what is lacking further south along the highway.

Between back-packing trips in various watersheds for sheep my partner and I picked one of the few bright days we had and drove back to the Tetse. We had talked to many of the resort owners and residents in the area and without exception they had all stated that grayling must be fished on a sunny day in clear water.

* * *

While this was in direct contradiction to my fly fishing upbringing in the North Okanagan, two years spent in the Peace River area and fishing the Pine River confirmed this fact.

We parked at mile "378," near where the river runs beside the highway, and unlimbered our fly rods. Pools are scarce on the flood plain river bed but we soon found one where the river converged after running over a wide gravel bed. It was a pool of unbelievably cold and clear water bordered by numerous fresh moose tracks and a number of older caribou prints.

Black gnat and mosquito flies are "surefire" lures for all B.C. waters and these we tied to our leaders. We fished both at once using the mosquito as the dry dropper and the gnat on the end as a wet fly.

I started at the head of the pool and cast to the first riffle. A solid black shape loomed on the fly, paused then submerged as I flipped the fly out of its mouth. There was a sudden swirl on the water as it returned searching for the fly — then it disappeared as I snagged my hastily cast fly on the tip of the rod.

* * *

Frustrating minutes passed as I tried to untangle the "buck-fever" mess but in the end I had to tie a new leader to the sink-tip wet fly line I was using. Calmed by this time, I cast once again to the same riffle. The minute the gnat hit the water a grayling of at least a pound and a half appeared, snapped the fly then submerged.

Remembering the soft mouth these fish have I lifted the rod slowly. The hook held and many minutes later I held high the brilliantly colored fish.

I cast again and was soon into a second of equal size and endurance. Success was equal on either fly all day. In each pool variety was the order of the day as we also hooked into good sized Rocky Mountain whitefish and Dolly Varden char.

It was for the grayling that we worked, however, prizing their brilliant hues and scrappy fights. While the smaller grayling were silver like the whitefish, the larger ones had body fins with bright orange countered with streaks of white. Their famous high dorsal fin flashed a brilliant blue with spots of orange and white.

* * *

The Tetse and Trout rivers (mile 476 to 490) were the clearest systems we saw on our trip. McDonald Creek, the Toad and Racing rivers, all parallel to the highway between mile 400 and 460, were creamy from high run-off.

We also spent one morning on the Trout River and found this to have good fishing along with Tetse River variety. Naturally, the more accessible pools near the highway receive fair pressure but they still hold good populations of fish.

The perennial favorites, the red and white spinner and the garden hackle are much recommended by the residents.

But, the fly was not to be beaten on that memorable day.

Denver's Olympics A Costly Snow Job?

DENVER (AP) — The bumper stickers read "Don't Olympicate Colorado" and "The Olympics—$100 Million Snow Job."

The slogans focus attention on one of this year's most debated issues in Colorado—whether the state should spend the money on the 1976 Winter Olympics.

Colorado residents will vote Nov. 7 on whether to cut off state funds for the Games.

State officials are in favor of the Games, granted to Colorado by international Olympic officials in 1970. But they are worried that state funds will be cut off by the Nov. 7 referendum.

Opponents say the money should be spent for more urgent needs, adding that the Olympics will only bring with them more crowding and more pollution.

Henry Kimbrough, administrative assistant to Lt.-Gov. John Vanderhoof, has taken a leave of absence from his state duties to direct a major effort to keep the Games in Colorado.

"We issued an invitation to the world in connection with the Games," Kimbrough said.

"And when we bid for the Olympics, we had complete support from everyone, so far as I know. I don't believe that two years later, we can just take the invitation back."

Kimbrough said the Olympics will cost about $35 million. About $5 million would come from the state government, about $10 million from television rights, licensing, franchising and ticket sales,

Volleyball Crowns To Reynolds, Vic

Victoria captured the boys' title while Reynolds picked up the "A" division girls' crown as play wrapped up in both high school volleyball leagues Wednesday.

Victoria beat host Claremont, 16-14, 15-12, while Mt. Douglas, which needed four wins to tie for first place, managed only a split at home.

Mr. Douglas split with Mount View, 4-15, 15-6, and Reynolds, 15-7, 8-15.

* * *

Esquimalt will join the seven league teams in the Lower Vancouver Island tournament next Wednesday at Victoria High School. Victoria, Reynolds, Belmont and Oak Bay will be in one section while Mt. Douglas, Claremont, Mount View and Esquimalt will make up the second to battle for the three berths in the Island tourney.

Reynolds won the girls' league with three wins out of four encounters during the final games Wednesday.

Reynolds took two from host Mount View, 15-7, 15-5, and split with Esquimalt, 15-4, 14-16. The loss dropped Esquimalt into third spot, one point behind Belmont which downed host Oak Bay, 15-6, 15-3, and defeated St. Ann's Academy, 15-0, 15-0.

Belmont finished on top of the "B" division and joins the "A" squads in the Lower Island championship Tuesday and Wednesday at Esquimalt.

11 Victorians Enter Squash

Victoria will be represented by 11 players at the Pacific Northwest Squash championships in Vancouver this weekend.

Phil Green and Egan Kuhn will be competing in the "B" class of the tournament, which starts Friday and ends with finals on Sunday.

Doug Hawkes, Bill Bell and Stan Heard are entered in the "B" veterans' class while Stella Heard and Nora Fenswick will vie for women's honors.

Oak Bay Girls Meet Field Hockey Champs

Oak Bay and Vancouver's Point Grey, the defending provincial champion, have been drawn in the same section of the two-day B.C. high school girls' field hockey championships starting Friday at Grand Forks.

Mt. Douglas, the Vancouver Island winner, is in the "B" section with Burnaby South, Columneetz of Williams Lake and host Grand Forks.

Braves Create Five-Team Race

Belmont Braves made it a five-team race right to the wire by nipping Mount View Hornets 4-3 in a Victoria High School Soccer League battle Wednesday.

Malcolm Moscrop scored to in the first half while right-give host Belmont a 1-0 lead winger Steve Hansen, with two, and Gerry Sheske counted for Braves after the intermission.

The top two teams in the league enter the playoff final Nov. 10 at Royal Athletic Park and also qualify for the B.C. tournament Nov. 16-18 in Vancouver.

With only five points separating the top five clubs and only three matches remaining in the regular schedule, it could be an interesting finish.

Late Goal Gives Port Alberni Share of Second

The victory moved Labs into a share of second place with Lakers in the Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey League, one point behind leading Powell River Regals.

ILLEGAL DRUGS: The Biggest Single Threat to Canadian Youth Today

The increase in known drug addicts, mostly young people, on Vancouver Island alone between 1970 and 1971 was 290 per cent. In the first year there were 314 known addicts on the Island. That jumped to 1,244 in the space of 12 months.

DONALD MUNRO and the CONSERVATIVE PARTY are concerned

It's time for a strong stance against drug pushers, the traffickers in mind-sapping, death-dealing social poisons. The Trudeau shrug is no protection against this very real threat to Canada.

Donald Munro Stands For

- The stiffest possible penalties for dealers in drugs at all levels, from the pusher on the street to the syndicate operator.
- No criminal record for a first time offence on simple possession of marijuana and provision for fines instead of jail sentences.
- Immediate rejection of the Le Dain Commission recommendation for legalization of Cannabis (Marijuana, Hashish).

Bays Clinch Grid Crown

Oak Bay Farmer Construction captured the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League title Wednesday with a 14-3 win over Saanich Hornets at Royal Athletic Park.

Quarterback Christie Sinclare led the victory with a touchdown and two converts while halfback Doug Archibald scored the other Oak Bay major. Norm Baker kicked a field goal for Saanich.

The result left Oak Bay and Hornets tied for the lead with 14 points each after nine league games. But Farmers collected the title on the basis of two wins in three meetings with Hornets this season.

Hornets now play the third-place club, to be decided Sunday when Cowichan Timbermen meet James Bay Athletic Association in the last league game, in a sudden-death semi-final next Wednesday.

Ex-Champs Lose as British Sweep

Benfica of Portugal, twice-champions and three-time losing finalists, face the prospect of elimination from the European Cup. The Portuguese club crashed to a 3-0 defeat against England's Derby County Wednesday in the first leg of their second-round match in Derby.

A 38,500 crowd saw Derby virtually clinch a quarter-final place with a three-goal burst in the first 39 minutes by Roy McFarland, Kevin Hector and John McGovern.

The match was a personal triumph for England centre-half McFarland, who not only scored Derby's opening goal but blotted out Benfica's goal-scoring ace, Eusebio.

Glasgow Celtic, champions in 1967, recovered from a first-half deficit to beat Hungary's Ujpest Dozsa in their first - leg encounter. Celtic trailed to a goal from veteran international Ferenc Puskas before Kenny Dalglish had the 55,000 fans cheering with two second-half goals.

British clubs won all their home matches.

Wrexham, the Welsh club which plays in the Third Division of the English League, stole the honors with an unexpected 3-1 victory over Yugoslavia's Hajduk Split in the European Cup of Cup Winners.

Hibernian of Scotland ran riot against FC Besa in Edinburgh, crushing the Albanians 7-1 with Jim O'Rourke getting three goals.

England's Tottenham Hotspurs continued its successful beating Olympiakos Piraeus of Greece 4-0. Jimmy Pearce netted two goals for the London club and Martin Chivers and Ralph Coates completed the scoring.

Leeds United was well placed in its bid to become the third English club in four years to win the Winners Cup after forcing a goalless draw in their away match against East Germany's Carl Zeiss Jena.

Argo Veteran Says It's His Last Season

TORONTO (CP) — Marv Luster, an all-Canadian five times as a member of the Toronto Argonaut defence, says he plans to retire after the 1972 Canadian Football League season.

Luster, who will be 33 next month, says the training camp and practice grind wears him down.

"This will probably be my last year," Luster said in an interview Tuesday. "It's too much of a struggle for me to keep up."

Luster has played most of his nine seasons with Argos at defensive half back, but this year was pressed into duty as middle linebacker, replacing injured Pete Martin.

Luster is a school teacher when not on the football field and said he doesn't plan to go into football coaching when he hangs up his uniform. He played college football at UCLA.

Gordon Head Protection Sought

A proposal to designate all of northenr Gordon Head district as an official community plan will be considered by Saanich council to protect the area as an essentially residential community.

The suggestion from Saanich planning department evolves from a seven-year-old policy of treating the university district as a special development area, council's planning committee was told.

From now on, said assistant planner Gil Laurenson, with the Saanich sewer enterprise program reaching its conclusion in Gordon Head, the pressure for new single-family-type subdivisions will be greater and the council should have a firmer policy.

Planners recognize the need for some commercial-service and multiple housing development within the area, and policy providing for this type of accommodation should be tied to a rigid form as provided for in an official plan.

Under the Municipal Act, council may by a two-thirds majority of all its members, designate any area for express purposes or pattern of subdivision, which then must have the approval of the provincial cabinet.

Such a plan must be followed strictly, as long as individual landowners' rights are respected. Any alteration of the plan needs the consent of the cabinet.

The northern portion of Gordon Head district is considered to be north of Feltham, east of Shelbourne or Cedar Hill and south of Mt. Douglas, the whole bordered on the east by Cordova Bay and Haro Strait.

Almost at its centre lie two blocks of land comprising about 30 acres each which the planning department suggests should be zoned for multiple dwelling use up to medium density apartment buildings.

Between them should be a service-commercial core of about 20 acres, in which a small, carefully designed shopping centre might be considered.

Laurenson said quality control and design features should be specified in the core sector.

One of the multiple zones lies just west of Tyndall, the other about a block east immediately south of San Juan.

With an official plan, the possibility of future spot zonings would be eliminated, Laurenson pointed out.

He also stressed that public investment in new services for the area would be protected because the sewer and waterworks systems now installed or in the process of being built have been designed to commercial capacity.

Planning committee chairman Frank Waring said the committee referred the whole matter to council because of its far-reaching implications.

SWISS LOAN CHEAPER

The British Columbia Municipal Finance Authority has arranged its second overseas loan — a 50-million Swiss franc deal (about $12 million Canadian) at 8 per cent interest.

Earlier, the authority arranged a $5.8 million loan of 19 million deutschemarks in West Germany.

The term of the Swiss franc, loan is 15 years and the price is $100.7per $100 bond.

The authority is also seeking funds in the Japanese money market.

The authorities has gone overseas in an effort to arrange loans at lower interest rates than are available in Canada.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, who as acting chairman has helped arrange the first loan, had said an identical loan in Canada would have cost the authority 8.5 per cent interest.

The money is loaned by the authority to municipalities. So far the authority has approved $36.5 million in loans to municipalities.

UNICEF TREAT NOT A TRICK

Ten cents will buy a two ounce chocolate bar.

It will also pay for vaccine to protect 10 underprivileged children from smallpox.

As Halloween draws near and households stock up with sugared goodies for the neighborhood kids, it's a time to remember the millions of children who have never heard of candy and seldom see real food.

UNICEF thinks about these children all year and asks that before you fill those candy baskets with toffees and jelly beans you think about putting even a few cents aside for the UNICEF cans that accompany ghosts and goblins Halloween night.

UNICEF is helping 64 countries improve their nutritional standards with equipment, supplies, training programs and the promotion of manufacture and sale of inexpensive protein-rich foods.

It has helped 86 countries build basic health services and 77 countries with education programs.

UNICEF has performed major relief and rehabilitation operations in Nigeria, Peru, Turkey, India and Bangladesh.

But thousands of children still die every day of hunger and malnutrition.

By helping Canadian children with their UNICEF collections on Halloween, you are also helping other, more needy children all over the world.

Eighty million dollars will buy one and a half supersonic aircraft. It will also pay for the whole of UNICEF's annual assistance to over a 100 million hungry children.

Former Diplomat Heads Art Gallery

Butler, who moved to Victoria four years ago after a diplomatic career including appointments as Canadian high commissioner to Malaysia and Singapore and ambassador to Thailand and Burma, has been active in the gallery's affairs, and was instrumental in obtaining the Chen Family Collection for Victoria.

Six new directors were elected, and seven of the retiring directors were re-elected, all by acclamation. Named for their first terms on the Art Gallery board were Mrs. Virginia Gareau, Mrs. Gloria Whelen, Dr. Peter Smith, Maurice Chazottes, Foster Isherwood and Dr. Julius Cchleicher.

Returned to the board were Mrs. H. R. Turner, Dr. Robin Skelton, Mrs. B. C. Hale, Bruce Brown, Don Newell Smith, Alec Reid and Donald Cox.

The treasurer's report presented to the membership showed the gallery facing a deficit of $11,986.43 at the end of August of this year. Of that, $7,936.94 was accumulated in the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1972.

Beer Flows Again

HAMILTON (CP) — A three-day strike by six office workers that shut off beer supplies to most Hamilton and district retail outlets ended early today when the group voted to accept terms of a 14-month agreement with Brewers Warehousing Co.

As a result, 11 of 13 stores in Hamilton, five of six in Burlington and stores in Dundas, Stoney Creek and Ancaster were closed.

Ray Bartolotti, president of Local 334 of the United Brewery Workers Union, said he has instructed all those who were off the job to return to work for their normal shifts today.

The office workers, seeking their first collective agreement, got an increase in weekly pay to $193.20 from $160.50.

Separate Quebec Issue Used Only to Fuel Campaign

By JOHN BEST

While apparently not a live-wire issue in English Canada, where there is perhaps a tendency to believe that the problem died with the resolution of the terrorist kidnap episode of 1970, it has bulled its way into the front lines in Quebec.

In part, this is due to the anti-campaign being run by the separatist Parti Quebecois under Rene Levesque. The PQ contention is that voting federally is a waste of time for Quebec because its only real future lies outside the Canadian national fabric.

But the real opening shot was fired by Claude Wagner, former Liberal provincial minister, and Quebec campaign leader for the Conservatives this time.

WAGNER

LEVESQUE

ATTACKED POLICY

About midway in the campaign for the Oct. 30 election, Mr. Wagner went to Toronto and attacked the federalism of Prime Minister Trudeau.

The sequel, also in Toronto, was an attack on Mr. Wagner by Marc Lalonde, former top aide to Prime Minister Trudeau and himself a candidate in the election. He accused Mr. Wagner of courting the separatist vote and questioned his federalist credentials.

This in turn brought an anry rebuttal from Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, who called Mr. Lalonde a Liberal hired gun and a personal hatchetman for the prime minister.

Mr. Trudeau uses the separatist issue in speeches outside Quebec, saying the Liberal party is the only one that doesn't want the separatist vote in Quebec. He also accuses Conservatives of dragging their feet on bilingualism and not wanting to make real progress. Quebecers won't wait for another 100 years on this question because they have "other options," he said in an obvious reference to separation.

Mr. Wagner, in turn, says society was sick when separatist terrorists kidnapped and killed Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister, and that the sickness is apparent again now. He expresses doubt there will be a complete Canada left if Mr. Trudeau is re-elected for another term.

Part of the Liberal strategy is to try to drive a wedge between the Conservative leader and Mr. Wagner.

Mr. Wagner offered them some scope when he said in the Gaspe peninsula Oct. 3 he would be in solidarity with Quebec independence if a pro-separatist government was democratically elected in Quebec.

But Mr. Stanfield has said several times that Quebec alone has not the right to decide for secession. Confederation involves a contract among many parties which can't be dissolved by one party acting alone.

Asked later to explain his solidarity statement, Mr. Wagner said:

If the "purely hypothetical" situation of Quebec's separation were realized, "for my part there is no question of my going to live elsewhere."

"I will remain in Quebec and I will work here."

His disclaimer of any notion to live elsewhere was no doubt prompted by an earlier statement of Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, who said he would move to another part of Canada if Quebec separated.

The leaders of all four major parties, including Mr. Stanfield, have made clear they would not recognize the election of a separatist party in Quebec by itself as sufficient mandate for secession.

All have spoken vaguely about the possibility of a referendum to ascertain the people's views more clearly. But there is no consensus on whether such a vote should take place only in Quebec or throughout Canada.

Mr. Caouette, for instance, holds it is a matter for Quebecers only to decide, while the clear import of Mr. Stanfield's statements is that any referendum should be a Canada-wide affair.

Mr. Trudeau came close to taking the same position when he said on a Montreal open-line radio program that his parliamentary secretary, Barnett Danson of Toronto, had "expressed his own opinion" when he stated earlier that any eventual referendum should be limited to Quebecers.

He pointedly declined, at a Quebec City news conference, to give an assurance that his government would never use force to prevent secession.

But he did say he would never accept Quebec independence. If it ever came about, he would go back to his native province and lead a return-to-the-fold federalist movement.

On an open-line program, Mr. Trudeau argued that as long as Quebec citizens continue to vote in federal elections no one can pretend they want to leave Canada. Why should a provincial election that brought a separatist party to power prevail over a federal vote that empowered a federal party?

Unlike Mr. Trudeau, New Democrat Leader David Lewis explicitly rejected the use of force to keep Canada together—if the decision to separate were made in an appropriate manner by a majority of Quebecers.

He would not accept the election provincially of the separatist Parti Quebecois as a final decision by Quebecers to secede.

Mr. Lewis has his own Quebec problem. This summer he was forced to repudiate a program drawn up by the provincial wing of the NDP on grounds it laid too much stress on the possibility of separation.

The draft was revised, and on Sept. 18 in Montreal Mr. Lewis told a news conference his differences with the Quebec organization had been regulated.

But Raymond Laliberte, leader of the Quebec wing, offered one of the most chilling independence scenarios yet in a speech to the Montreal Labor Council only 2½ weeks later.

He said a separatist party, if elected to form a majority Quebec government, "would have received only a mandate to achieve the independence of Quebec and it is impossible not to negotiate with Canada the terms of the liquidation of the Canadian constitution and the formula for association."

"Once these negotiations are finished, the separatist government would have to submit the result to the population through a referendum."

Mr. Laliberte said in a speech to the Montreal Labor Council Oct. 5 that the negotiations would take at least two years.

"We will have to determine who will have rights over waters, land and airways. We will also have to determine the status of companies based in Quebec but registered in Ottawa."

Mr. Laliberte said many factors could lead to Quebecers voting to stay in Canada if the question was submitted in a referendum.

"Our position remains the same," he said. "We will agree to negotiate independence if the voters point in that direction."

ECM ENTRY PROMPTS BRITISH FESTIVAL

LONDON (AP) — Britain will stage a 10-day festival of music, drama, sport and TV entertainment to celebrate joining the European Common Market in January.

The festival, called Fanfare For Europe, starts Jan. 3, two days after Britain officially becomes a partner in the enlarged market along with the Irish republic and Denmark.

The plans were unveiled Tuesday by festival organizers who have been given £350,000 (about $840,000) of government money to plan the program.

Part of television's contribution will be a beauty contest to elect a Miss TV Europe.

Lord Goodman, chairman of the committee for cultural events, said the cultural side will be "the most interesting which has ever been held in the space of just over a week in my lifetime."

There will be concerts by 15 orchestras including the Amsterdam Concertgebouw and the Berlin Philharmonic; the European premiere of Samuel Beckett's new play Not I and a reading by actor Sir Lawrence Olivier of a specially written European ode by Christopher Fry.

SECRET FUND STORIES DENIED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House and the Republican party leadership denied Wednesday a Washington Post story that H. R. Haldeman, President Nixon's White House chief of staff, had been authorized to approve payments from an alleged secret Nixon campaign fund used in part to finance intelligence gathering and political espionage.

At the White House, press secretary Ronald Ziegler coupled his denial with a lengthy denunciation of the Washington Post for engaging in a "political effort" at "character assassination" which he said was "the shoddiest type of journalism."

The statement from the White House was the sharpest yet in attacking the Post. It was the first to comment so specifically on individual allegations contained in the newspaper's stories detailing the operation of what federal investigators have said was an apparently unprecedented spying and sabotage campaign against Democratic candidates.

Post executive editor Benjamin Bradlee said Wednesday, "we stand by our story."

The Post reported Wednesday that Haldeman had access to the fund, which at times totalled $700,000. The newspaper attributed the story to federal investigators and accounts of sworn testimony before the grand jury investigating the Watergate bugging incident.

The Post said that the testimony to the grand jury came from Hugh W. Sloan Jr., former treasurer of the Nixon campaign. Sloan's attorney denied "unequivocally" that his client had named Haldeman in connection with the secret fund.

Ziegler denied that "Bob Haldeman had access to the fund," and also the existance of the fund itself. He said also that Haldeman had not been questioned by the FBI in connection with sabotage and espionage charges as the Post had alleged.

At a press conference at the headquarters of The Committee to Re-Elect The President, Clark MacGregor, the campaign chairman, also issued a direct denial of the Post story.

"I am assured by both Haldeman and (Maurice) Stans (the finance chairman of the committee) that at no time did Bob Handleman have authority to disperse or to direct the disbursement of funds contributed for the president's re-election."

Press Favors Nixon

NEW YORK (AP) — With less than two weeks to go before the United States general election Nov. 7, President Nixon has received the editorial endorsement of more than 700 newspapers, including some traditionally Democratic publications. The total is well over the number of endorsements he received in 1968.

Editor and Publisher, the weekly trade magazine, reported on Oct. 5 that a survey of the 1,764 daily newspapers in the United States showed that of those responding, 688 had endorsed Nixon for re-election. Thirty-eight newspapers backed Democratic candidate George McGovern and 169 said they had made no decision.

In 1968, 634 newspapers endorsed Nixon, 146 backed Democratic nominee Hubert Humphrey, 12 supported third party candidate George Wallace and 250 remained uncommitted, Editor and Publisher said.

$1M OLYMPIC LOTTERY SOUGHT

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government is studying the possibility of a national lottery with a $1 million prize as part of the financing arrangements for the 1976 Olympics here, a Games official said Wednesday.

Louis Chantigny, vice-president of the Olympic Games Committee, confirmed the $1 million prize and said "it might be an all-Canadian lottery."

The Gazette quotes a source close to Maurice Custeau, chairman of the Quebec lotteries and racetrack board, as saying tickets on the lottery will sell for $1, but it has not been decided if the drawing will be held annually or more often.

So far, Olympic committee officials and Mayor Jean Drapeau refuse to say how much money they expect the lottery scheme to raise.

GOV'T MAY REVIEW COMINCO GRANT

CRANBROOK (CP) — Veterans Affairs Minister Arthur Lang said Wednesday that the federal government will renegotiate a $1.5 million grant to Cominco for a copper smelter in eastern B.C. if the provincial government doesn't come up with its share of money for the project.

The minister, who is not a candidate in the Oct. 30 federal election would not say how much more money Ottawa might donate, but said if Cominco "comes back to the government with a good argument, they'll get more."

NDP 'Expels' Member 33674

HAWKESBURY, Ont. (CP) — Member 33674 of the New Democratic Party was formally expelled from the party Wednesday, but he is scarcely brokenhearted.

For one thing, as far as he is concerned he never joined the NDP.

The matter arose Wednesday when NDP officials discovered that the listed holder of membership card 33674 is Montreuil.

After issuing news releases demanding that Montreuil "withdraw from Conservative party work or face possible expulsion from the NDP," the party carried out its threat.

Montreuil said he and his wife received unsolicited membership cards in the mail about a year ago.

He said he reacted in the same way he does when he receives anything else from the NDP: "I throw it in the garbage can."

Montreuil, a 53-year-old town councillor, added that perhaps some persons thought he was an NDP supporter because he supported Hawkesbury Mayor Yvon Montpetit in a mayoralty race. Montpetite later ran as an NDP candidate in the Ontario provincial election.

Montreuil and his campaign manager, J. M. Demers, both said Montreuil has always been a Conservative and was never involved with the NDP.

"If he was I'd throw him out myself," Demers added.

NDP Hypocritical On Taxes: Grit

CALGARY (CP) — Manitoba Liber Leader I. H. Asper Wednesday said national NDP Leader David Lewis is a hypocrite and accused him and Manitoba NDP Premier Ed Schreyer of misleading the Canadian public with the "corporate welfare bum" theme.

Speaking to the annual dinner of the Calgary Life Underwriters' Association, Asper said it was "hyprocritical of Mr. Lewis" to campaign on a platform that does not conform to the performance of the New Democratic Party when it is in office.

The provincial Liberal leader said he wanted to "defend the profession of politics against those who abuse their public-speaking platforms to fill the Canadian people full of mistrust, divisiveness and hatred, based up innuendo, half-truths and other misleading data."

This abuse can easily be spotted in Lewis' claims that the resources industry are paying too little tax and are free-loading off the Canadian public, he said.

Cities like Thompson, Flin Flon, The Pas and Leaf Rapids, all in Manitoba, as well as several tens of thousands of jobs would not exist if Manitoba had adopted the policies of the NDP leader.

If Premier Schreyer had implemented the policies the NDP calls on Canada to adopt, the Canadian dollar would be devalued and there would be no northern development and no tax revenue from the mining industry.

"What Mr. Lewis and Mr. Schreyer don't tell the public is that when you add the special taxes paid by the mining industries, such as municipal taxes, royalties and mining taxes, they are as heavily taxed as all industry in Canada."

NDP ACTION IN BRITISH COLUMBIA PUTS PEOPLE FIRST

At long last, B.C. has a Government which puts the interests of all the people ahead of the special interests of privileged corporations. Premier Dave Barrett has already announced immediate action to guarantee all pensioners and wage-earners decent incomes.

The Trudeau government promised a Just Society, but it has turned out to be the Corporate Welfare Bums who have been looked after while Canada's elderly, unemployed and many wage earners have been left out in the cold. British Columbians, in particular, have been shortchanged by a government which seems oblivious to the problems of Canadians in Western Canada.

Fed up with empty political promises, the people in three provinces have now turned to the NDP for action, action to put the needs of people first. In a very short time, NDP governments in Manitoba and Saskatchewan have demonstrated clearly that there is a difference with the NDP. Now British Columbians have made the same decision and are already beginning to see results. More New Democrats in Ottawa can make the same kind of difference Federally, putting the interests of people first.

ISN'T IT TIME WE HAD MORE OF THIS KIND OF ACTION IN OTTAWA?

Money Marking System To Cut Counterfeiting

By GLENNIS ZILM

OTTAWA (CP) — A new system for marking money and documents that will permit rapid detection of counterfeit attempts has been developed by scientists at the National Research Council.

Dr. J. A. Dobrowolski of the council's physics division described the new process in San Francisco this week at a meeting of the Optical Society of America. He explained in an interview before he left for California how the new system would work.

It calls for the application of a special optical thin film coating to a part of the document. This coating will change color as it is moved.

"A coating of this type on a passport, for example, may appear red when viewed from one position and may look green or blue when tilted."

Counterfeiting and forging documents is becoming an increasingly troublesome problem, and special inks, intricate engraving and special paper, have not offered adequate protection, he said.

So about two years ago, the Bank of Canada turned to the council.

Dr. Dobrowolski said it is relatively simple to design a series of thin coatings to give a sequence of color changes when viewed from different angles, but "it would be almost impossible to reproduce the coatings."

The coatings would be simple enough even for the man in the street to spot, he said. For example, it might be possible to put such coatings along the edges of bills, so a bank teller could spot counterfeit bills merely by riffling through them.

Dr. Dobrowolski said the council has filed for patents on this work.

$52 DAILY FOR HYDRO LIGHTS

Turning out the lights on the B.C. Hydro building in Vancouver after business hours during the summer months would result in a saving of $52 a day, Premier Barrett said Wednesday.

Barrett was answering a question on the legislative order paper from Don Phillips (SC—South Peace).

The premier said the government is studying the question of blacking out the building but said it could not be done in the winter months because the lighting is linked with the heating system.

Adults Flock To Night School

A record registration of 950 is expected by Saanich school district's continuing education department by the end of November.

A new high of 911 adults are already enrolled in a wide variety of courses, and four courses scheduled to begin before Nov. 24 should bring enrolment to a level 8 per cent higher than last year's, the department says.

The four courses yet to begin are Parent Effectiveness at Claremont high school; Candlemaking and Sing for Fun at North Saanich junior high, and Defensive Driving at Royal Oak junior high.

Experiments with daytime courses have proven successful using Mount Newton junior high instructional materials room in the morning. More are planned.

Last Assembly For Haig-Brown

The University of Victoria's academic assembly will be addressed by Chancellor Roderick Haig-Brown at 4 p.m. Friday in the university gymnasium.

The assembly honors scholarship and other award winners and also presents diplomas in public administration.

It will be Haig-Brown's last assembly as his term of office expires in December.

This year, 385 scholarships and award winners along with 860 B.C. government scholarship winners and 25 civil service training graduates will be honored.

Appeal Set In Priory Election

An appeal under provision of the Societies Act will be heard early next year in the disputed election of mother superior at St. Mary's Priory in Colwood a year ago.

In an earlier attempt to appeal, the move was disallowed by Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton in B.C. Supreme Court because he ruled the court did not have jurisdiction in a matter dealing with a private society.

Appeal lawyer Hugh McMillan, acting for Sister Mary Agnes Eaton, said the contention is that there were defects in the election of Sister Leonette Hoesing, formerly of the congregation of St. Gertrude the Great in Yankton, S.D.

According to the Societies Act, under which the Society of the Love of Jesus is registered, an appeal can be made through the civil courts, McMillan said.

20,000 Copies Of Socred Bill Turned Down

The provincial government Wednesday refused a request from the Social Credit opposition to have the Queen's Printer publish 20,000 copies of three Social Credit bills presented at the current legislative session.

Speaker Gordon Dowding said the request was rejected because the printing would have meant a change in policy and would have caused a great deal of extra public expense.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge William Ostler explained the gravity of criminal court proceedings for the benefit of "fellow pupils" who appeared Wednesday to watch two 17-year-olds receive sentences for breaking and entering and theft.

Bradley G. Propp, 2781 Penelope, and David S. Thomson, 2783 Penelope, pleaded guilty Oct. 11 to breaking into the Royal Colwood Golf Course and stealing five golf clubs valued at $28 each. The clubs were later pawned for $10.

A pre-sentence report, prepared by a probation officer, noted the youths' involvement with drugs and Ostler said there are many people the same age who are heavily involved with illegal drugs.

"Probably few average citizens realize that, in this community and in many Canadian communities, there are 17-year-olds who are regular drug-users," said Ostler.

After imposing a suspended sentence and two-year probationary term for each youth, Ostler made his "additional comments" on court proceedings and probationary terms.

"There is an idea in some quarters that probation is a simple matter and that by getting probation you're getting away with it. Probation is not simple at all," he said.

"I emphasize that for the special benefit of that claque of a dozen or so pupils, apparently from your school, who appeared with you on the last occasion (Oct. 11)," he said.

"As you well know, at the conclusion of the proceedings, they waited only until they got into the lobby of this courtroom and they behaved disgracefully, with derisive laughter and shouting.

"The court is always very pleased to have young persons, whether school pupils or not, attend sessions of the court, as it is instructional, and young people should see how the courts of this country operate.

"But these courts and these proceedings are not a circus, and this sort of behavior from young people is poor citizenship and it's contempt of court and it will not be permitted again.

"If there had been any police officers out in the lobby on that last occasion steps would have been taken at that time to take the names of those pupils," he said.

"This is not a laughing matter. It's extremely serious and if there's any disobedience of any of the terms of probation you will find that out and that will be a good example to those of your fellow pupils who think the whole thing is so funny," he said.

CP Plans $20 Million B.C. Hotel

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $20 million hotel is planned by CP Hotels Ltd. for the Vancouver waterfront, the company's controller, Richard Morley, said Wednesday.

Morley, in a telephone interview from Toronto, said feasibility studies are still in progress. He said the company hopes to make a detailed announcement early in 1973.

"At the moment, we're looking at about 500 rooms," he said, "but it isn't definite whether it will be 400, 500 or 600 rooms.

Morley said the hotel would probably cover the CP Rail shunting yards, west of Granville Street.

Second Club Closes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Oil Can Harry's, the flagship of Danny Baceda's entertainment complex, was closed Wednesday night.

It was the second of Baceda's three night clubs to close since the group went into receivership last weekend. The Cave, also under Baceda's control, was closed Monday. Only Isy's Strip City remains open.

The three clubs have liabilities of about $860,000 with $440,000 of that to the Bank of Montreal, which appointed a receiver.

Container Terminal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said Wednesday that tenders will be called Nov. 23 for the wharf portion of the proposed 77-acre container terminal on the Vancouver waterfront. He said construction is expected to start by Feb. 19, 1973.

Stifle City Growth

KELOWNA (CP) — W. C. Bennett, chairman of the Central Okanagan Regional District, suggested creation of a district municipality surrounding Kelowna and stifling any further outward growth by the city. He said it would incorporate all areas not already within the framework of the regional district.

Car Ring Cracked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police believe they cracked a stolen car ring with the arrest of a 23-year-old man. They raided a private garage and seized two stolen cars, one of which had been stripped. Officers believe the ring provided "stolen-to-order" vehicles.

SFU Chairman

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paul Cote, a professional engineer who graduated last year with a master of business administration degree from Simon Fraser University, was elected as chairman of the university's board of governors. He succeeds chancellor Kenneth P. Caple, who continues as a member of the board.

Lottery Asked

ALDERGROVE (CP) — A group of residents here have applied to the provincial government for permission to hold a $1 million lottery to raise money to build a multi-purpose sports centre. A spokesman said they hope to sell tickets on a world-wide basis. First prize would be a 20-acre farm and its buildings. Tickets would sell for $2 each.

Special Centre

VANCOUVER (CP) — A special procedures radiology centre, which has been in trial operation since March, was officially opened Wednesday at Vancouver General Hospital. The centre, installed at a cost of about $265,000, will mainly be used to diagnose disease of the nervous system and those that affect arteries and veins.

Injunction Asked

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Society of Christian Care of the Elderly, the trustee board of the New Vista Society and nine construction firms began Supreme Court action Wednesday against the International Union of Elevator Constructors, Local 82. The plaintiffs seek an injunction to stop picketing at two apartment blocks for old people and at the B.C. Automobile Association building.

Protestants Losing Faith In British Army Actions

The Manchester Guardian

BELFAST — "It's desperate," said a middle-aged Protestant housewife, stabbing me in the chest with her finger. She leaned back for effect, and then grabbed me by the sleeve. "And what's more," she added conclusively, "it's ridiculous." The "it" she was referring to was the recent Protestant violence in Belfast: and when things are "desperate" and "Ridiculous" in Belfast they can hardly get worse.

From that summing up followed a tirade — an interminable list of incidents involving soldiers which she had either experienced personally or heard about from her friends.

At the moment this theme dominates all Protestant conversation in Belfast. The behavior of individual soldiers and small incidents which often appear trivial add up to form an overall impression of the British army for the normal man and woman in the street which is in many ways as important here as the moves of the politicians or the actions of the men of violence.

Another woman chipped in: "And the language is terrible. Some soldiers came down the street and they were shouting 'Orange bastards!' and things much worse, and taunting the lads to come out and fight them hand to hand."

The Protestants have an uneasy feeling that they are eventually going to be sold out by Britain and left on their own and they are already disillusioned by the failure of the army to deal with the IRA firmly enough.

Now their relationships with the army are rapidly changing in a way which is ominous for the future. Before the events of the past few weeks, and particularly the past few days, most Protestants had fairly clear feelings about the army. If the two were not always particularly friendly, they were at least fairly trusting. The soldiers had been brought there to protect them and to deal with the IRA.

Now they feel the army attitude has changed and they are being meted out the same treatment from soldiers which they had previously dismissed as Catholic lies.

A Tartan youth was more explicit. "They are all bastards," he said. Any exceptions? "No exceptions," he replied, "only a few of them were bastards till last week but now they all are."

His friend pointed to a table with a white tablecloth and flowers on it erected in the middle of the Newtownards Road in memory of William Warnock, 15-year-old boy who was run down in rioting on Monday night. "There was an army three-tonner came down the road and it turned round when it saw the table and came back. A soldier leaned out and spat at it. They're all bastards and murderers."

How many of the claims and stories are true it is not possible to say. Some may be invented, most of them are probably exaggerated. What is important is that the people in the Protestant areas now believe them.

"I don't know what to think" said a middle-aged man, "you hear so many things. But I used to think that all the Catholic tales about the troops were lies and now I'm not so sure."

The army will be the first to admit that the behavior of every individual soldier is not always a model of perfection. It can hardly be expected to be. Apart from being shot, bombed, pelted with stones and petrol bombs, the troops are subjected to almost intolerable harassment, provocation, rudeness, taunts, and jeers. Often the situation they are working in is dangerous and confused, and in such an atmosphere of excitement it is impossible for anyone to behave rationally all the time.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that through their day-to-day actions, whether true or untrue, and rightly or wrongly, the troops are rapidly losing the faith and trust which they once had from the Protestants, and which they will find hard to win back again.

Wade Withdraws Pollen Slander Suit

City architect John Wade has withdrawn his slander suit against Mayor Peter Pollen following an apology made public by Pollen Wednesday.

Wade launched the suit against Pollen about five months ago after Pollen had called on Wade May 8 to resign from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission. Pollen called for the resignation because of conflict of interest and Wade's "political declarations" against the city's anti-highrise zoning policies.

Pollen had also charged that Wade's "professional and biased counsel" on the commission had contributed to the city's poor planning.

"I feel it my duty to express in the clearest possible terms my sincere apology to Mr. John Wade for the remarks I made recently concerning him in his role as an architect, a member of the National Capital Commission, and the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission.

In doing so, I fully recognize that Mr. Wade, a long-time resident of Victoria, a community worker, a distinguished and active member of his profession, past chairman of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission, has made many contributions to our community, both in his profession and as a member of many social and cultural organizations.

"In fact, his part as one of the team of architects in the City Hall restoration and his long service on the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission are examples of this contribution.

"I will continue to hold him in high regard. We have been friends in the past and, by reason of the mutual respect we have for each other, it is fitting that his unfortunate matter is at an end."

Lawyer Ian Stewart, acting for Wade, said that libel suits against the Victoria Times and the Daily Colonist would also be withdrawn.

Schools To Honor War Dead

Public schools throughout British Columbia will close on Monday, Nov. 13, in observance of Remembrance Day, Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced today.

Dailly said she hopes schools throughout the province will hold special assemblies on the Friday before the holiday, so that students will be able to suitably honor those who have fought for their country.

"Emphasis should be placed at this time upon the need for bringing about a future which is highlighted by peace and honor for all the people of the world," she said.

Gov't Taking Offices In Belmont Building

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government has signed a lease to move some of its offices into the Belmont Building on Government Street, Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said today.

Hartley said the government will be taking over seven floors of the building, which is being remodelled inside. He said "major portions" of the departments of rehabilitation and health will be moved into the building.

The move will come, he said, later this year or early in 1973. He would not disclose the length of the lease but said "it would not be worthwhile for the government to lease for less than three years."

The government will look at its lease arrangement "year by year," Hartley said.

Premier Barrett has expressed the desire to get as many of his cabinet ministers as possible into the main Legislative Building, Hartley said. But that factor was not the only consideration made for the move.

'CRIMINAL'

He said the move will provide the needed room for administrative workers in the departments of health and rehabilitation and is not just designed to bring cabinet ministers into the main building.

Hartley maintains his office in the Douglas Building across the street from the main Legislative Building. Several other cabinet ministers also have their offices there.

Hartley made no mention of the cost of the lease.

51-YEAR LEASE

Renovation is being done by Stevenson Construction Ltd. for Fort Victoria Properties Ltd., which was granted a 51-year lease on the building by the federal department of public works.

Sam Bawlf, of Fort Victoria Properties, said the two lower floors will remain commercial, one housing a restaurant, and there would also be provision for entertainment facilities.

Victoria Selected As Institute Site

No date has been set for construction of a multi-million dollar oceanographic institute in the Greater Victoria area, which was announced Wednesday by Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm.

"The project is expected to employ over a five-year period up to 1,000 people," Lindholm said at a press conference. "It would be one of the major employers in the area."

Site of the oceanographic institute has been up in the air since the federal government announced the planned institute in 1969.

Victoria was originally favored for the project, but later studies, including a 1970 report for the Science Council of Canada, recommended Vancouver because of resources at the University of British Columbia.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Terry Farmer said today he was delighted with the decision to locate the institute here.

"The only thing that we're concerned about now is to press for a date," he said.

"We wouldn't like it to become a political issue but we would like to find out when the government is planning to do this," said Farmer.

Most likely site for the oceanographic institute complex is the Colwood area, said Lindholm, with Patricia Bay and HMC Dockyard at Esquimalt also possibilities. He estimated the federal government will spend $5 to $7 million building the complex.

Mayor Peter Pollen said today that if the institute is established locally it will be a "great potential boon" to the entire region, regardless of its actual location.

The institute would require support facilities in the form of research establishments, and services to those establishments, while it could also lead to the development of specialized faculties at the University of Victoria, he said.

However, Pollen deplored the "sickening" timing of the announcement, adding: "I personally don't believe the country should be run by this type of blatant pork-barrelling."

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford were unavailable for comment.

Environment Minister Davis has given the institute to Victoria "just for the election, of course" because the Liberals feel their candidates here need some assistance, said Munro.

"I wasn't just sure where the plum was going to be dropped and here it is," he said.

"Estevan, here we come," he added, referring to a Liberal promise in the 1968 election to build a $6 million ship on the west coast to replace the retired coast guard ship Estevan. The ship was never replaced.

Munro said he would be delighted if the oceanographic institute stays in Greater Victoria, "and it will if there's a Stanfield government."

Besides the 1,000 persons — oceanographers and technicians — directly employed by the institute, Lindholm expects the complex will create job spinoffs in other areas.

"I think it opens up tremendous horizons" for Dockyard for the Defence Research Estalishment Pacific, for the Victoria Machinery Depot, a primary submersible producer, and for Yarrows Shipyard Ltd., he said.

Business 'Apathetic' To Jaycee Toy Drive

Disenchanted with the lack of response by businessmen for toys or donations for their Santa Ship, the Junior Chamber of Commerce will ask the public for help this year.

Vice-president Glyn Williams said the Jaycees found increasing apathy among businessmen during the past four years when asked for help.

"We need 1,500 toys for underprivileged children who live in isolated spots in the Gulf and San Juan Islands," he said.

"We've been canvassing since Sept. 1 and all we have so far is 50 toys, and six weeks to go."

Williams explained:

"The Bay has agreed to place a big Christmas tree on the second floor of the store. The idea is that people who have toys to donate will be able to leave them there, beginning Nov. 7. Even used toys will be fine, providing they are workable."

Williams said the Jaycees will wrap all the toys.

The Bay will also donate $200 in a novel way toward the Santa Ship.

"We will be asking children to write letters, saying what they would like to give," said Williams, "and these will be put in a big bag under the tree. Each day a letter will be drawn and the store will donate whatever toy the letter suggests."

A ceiling of $5 has been set for each toy.

Another big problem facing the Jaycees is to get between 1,500 and 2,000 pounds of candy and fruit, to be given out along with the toys. Williams hopes people with left-over Halloween candy will donate it. The Jaycees' office is at 207 Government.

This will be the 10th year the Jaycees have had their Santa Ship. As in 1971, HMCS Porte de la Reine, with Lt.-Cmdr. Al Horner in command, will be used.

Williams said two stops — one at Vesuvius Bay on Salt Spring Island and the other at Maple Bay — have been dropped because his group felt they were not accomplishing their purpose of helping the underprivileged children at either place.

"There was this Indian lady who still believed in Santa. She had written a letter, saying that she had wanted a doll all her life. Somehow, all the kids in the school had heard about her letter.

"You should have seen her face when she got the doll — and the kids' too. It was just wonderful."

This year, the Porte de la Reine will leave Esquimalt Friday, Dec. 15 at 6:30 p.m. and tie up in the Inner Harbor that evening about 8 p.m. As usual, she will be bright with lights and decorations and emanating carols during the evening hours.

WILLIAMS
. . . asking public help

Before entering the Inner Harbor, she will make a sail-past off the Victoria coastline.

Aboard her, if the navy approves, a child chosen from among the 40 whose letters to The Bay have been drawn, will be a guest of honor.

Leaving the Inner Harbor at 6 a.m., Dec. 16, the ship will make stops at Bedwell Harbor on Pender Island, Roche Harbor on San Juan Island and Waldon Island that day. She will stop at Deer Harbor on Orcas Island, to rendezvous there with the Bellingham Jaycees' Santa Ship.

Final stop that day will be at Friday Harbor on San Juan.

The Sunday stops will be at Kuper Island, Predy Harbor on Thetis Island and Shell Beach near Ladysmith.

Report Revives Street Extension

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A years-old controversial proposal to extend Michigan Street through a corner of Beacon Hill Park, one partial answer to downtown traffic congestion, is revived in a report soon to be released by city hall.

City council has not officially discussed the study, which is called the Southern Fringe Bypass Report, and neither aldermen nor officials will comment on its contents.

However, the Times has learned that the Michigan extension is mentioned in the report, not as a firm recommendation, but as one of several alternatives which council could adopt to meet the ever-increasing problem of inadequate streets handling too much traffic.

The idea, first mooted strongly in the 1967 James Bay Land Use and Transportation Plan, envisages extending Michigan to the east to connect with Heywood in the vicinity of Rupert Street — by carving through a rocky, attractive section of the park.

City hall sources indicate, however, that the extension as now outlined would not substantially reduce the actual park area as it would be coupled with closure of the Superior Street "loop" to the north. This would mean, in effect, a land swap.

Ask the Times

Q. Could you please tell me how I go about joining the junior branch of the Victoria Natural History Society. L. M.

A. Call Freeman King, 541 MacKenzie Ave., 479-2066.

Q. Was it possible for Canadian photographers to superimpose images of people on another photograph in 1865?—C.F.

A. Yes, the technique was known then.

Q. Why don't you see waitresses on B.C. Ferries, only waiters?—D.D.

A. A spokesman for B.C. Ferries personnel department says there are waitresses on the ferries. Waitresses, he said, work in coffee shops, while waiters work in cafeterias and restaurants on the vessels. The reason for this system, he said, "was just a matter of division of duties."

Rare Marmots Threatened By Logging

Today one of the animal's few remaining colonies is in danger of being wiped out by logging operations near Nanaimo, says biologist David Charles Kerridge of Malaspina College.

Kerridge said hunters and naturalists have asked Crown Zellerbach and MacMillan Bloedel, which have the timber rights on the land, to save the animal's habitat.

The island marmot is a distinct species, differing from other varieties found in other parts of Canada and commonly called woodchucks. He doesn't live in woods but in burrows in alpine regions.

The animal is slightly larger than a fully grown tomcat. It sports a dark chocolate brown pellage, seldom whistles like a woodchuck and hibernates usually from September to spring.

Little is known about the marmot except that it is rare and only common to the island. There are only a few other known colonies.

Kerridge and members of the Nanaimo Fish and Game Club, who are acting as guardians for the colony, are keeping the exact location of the animal's habitat a secret because they don't want them disturbed by people.

There are about 10 animals in the colony.

Kerridge said a logging road is being pushed to some trees standing on the edge of the alpine meadow where the animals live. The trees act as a buffer and protects the burrows from cold winds.

Their removal, he believes, would result in the extinction of the colony.

"According to the forestry firm the timber is not merchantable," he said. "It is largely scrub."

Kerridge hopes the logging companies will co-operate as they have nothing to gain by cutting the trees.

"It will be a pity if this species becomes extinct," he said. "It is now on the endangered list — a warning to us that we will lose another animal unless we take steps to protect the species."

INMATE RECAPTURED IN SASKATCHEWAN

A William Head minimum-security institution inmate who failed to return Oct. 22, was arrested Wednesday by Foam Lake RCMP near Yorkton, Saskatchewan, Colwood RCMP said today.

When he failed to return Sunday, Yorkton RCMP were notified because Kowalchuk's next-of-kin live in that area, police said.

Charges pending in Victoria will probably be waived to Saskatchewan, RCMP said.

Pound Keeper Oost picks up stray

Oost warns owners first time he finds their dog loose

A Break in Routine

Dog owners who fail to keep their pets under control take a far dimmer view of Saanich Pound Keeper Albert Oost than does his quarry.

Most dogs encountered in Oost's daily patrol come at his call and readily accept a ride to the pound. Their destination is the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals which boards dogs collected by the two Saanich pound keepers.

$5 Fee First Time

A trip to the pound costs Saanich owners $5.00 for a first offence, plus $2.00 a day for room and board. Repeaters can cost owners as much as a week's groceries.

The pound fee rises $5 for each offence up to and including the fourth. The fifth time good old Spot lands in the pound the fee jumps from $20 to $30, and this fine is doubled for a sixth offence. So far, owners have learned their lesson at the $30 level. The $60 fine has never been collected.

Oost tries to give dogs and owners a break. He warns owners the first time he finds their dogs running loose — and running loose means on public property.

Dogs scratching their fleas on front lawns are safe. They could be on their own property. Oost makes his own decisions about when to impound an animal. Recently he picked up a Samoyed pup playing in the middle of a busy street and returned him to his owner with a warning.

"That pup will be hit by a car if his owner doesn't keep him confined," Oost said.

"In families where both parents work, the dog often gets kicked out for the whole day," he said.

He also blames the custom of buying "a Christmas puppy" for many dog-control problems.

"The children get sick of looking after the dog and parents are stuck with it," he said.

This means large numbers of dogs that are a public nuisance because they have never been properly trained.

"No one should have to put up with a neighbor's dog damaging property," Oost said.

The SPCA employs three inspectors who act as pound keepers for Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt. Dogs collected are boarded at SPCA headquarters.

Retrieving a pet from the pound costs less in Victoria ($3.00), Oak Bay and Esquimalt ($5.00). There is no sliding scale for repeaters and board is only $1.00 a day.

"If you are going to let your dog run loose, make sure it isn't in Saanich," an SPCA spokesman said.

Held Five Week Days

Impounded dogs are held for their owners for at least five week days and then put up for adoption.

Dave Beeching, manager of the Victoria SPCA, says the length of time an unclaimed animal is kept by the society depends on the dog's individual characteristics.

"If a dog has a reasonably good disposition and is a good size for adoption we keep him as long as we have room," Beeching said.

In 1971 the SPCA handled 1,582 dogs impounded in the four municipalities. Owners claimed 932 and the society found homes for 103.

The remaining 547 had to be destroyed.

New IUD Tested

OTTAWA (CP) — An intrauterine contraceptive device, which will release daily doses of a natural female hormone over a one-year period, will be tested in about 50 local women starting before the end of the year, an Ottawa gynecologist said this week.

Dr. Gilles Hurteau, head of the Ottawa General Hospital department of obstetrics and gynecology, said the T-shaped device gives out daily doses of progesterone through a special membrane.

He described the new device at a medical conference.

It is an improvement over conventional intrauterine devices because the progesterone will act directly on the wall of the uterus or womb, he said in an interview later.

Little Sticky Fingers And Mr. Bell's Folly

I'm not one to nurse a grudge, but at times I wish that Alexander Graham Bell had taken up chinchilla breeding. I realize, of course, that I would sooner do without my nose than a telephone.

We lived without Bell's folly in our home in Puerto Rico for the two years we were there. Every day when he left for the office, my husband would get my tersely written communications to the outside world. "Call the electrician and tell him I'll turn green before I pay him $27.50. Call Juanita to sit for us on Saturday night."

After two years of this, my husband crawled to our local telephone company here and offered them his Playboy centrefold collection and 14 shares of General Motors stock in exchange for a telephone.

We'd be fine now if it weren't for the children. Ever since direct distance dialing was introduced, we've been getting billed for random dialings to Baffin Island and the Republic of Chad. Local calls are worse I'd get more messages from a fledgling carrier pigeon than I do from the children.

"Some man called and said you shouldn't forget tonight."

"What man?" (What happened at that party last night?)

"I don't know. It wasn't Daddy," he added significantly. It turned out to be a visit from our insurance agent, but I had several bad hours wondering.

We decided to have a trial run to iron out the kinks. My husband stayed home, while I phoned from next door. After two rings, someone picked up the phone at home but didn't say a word. All I could hear was this heavy breathing. After two minutes I broke first and said, "Hello, is this Eric?" More heavy breathing. "Is Daddy there?" Still the asthmatic wheeze. Later I found out from his father that he had been nodding his head at the receiver.

After several months of practice sessions, we had them lisping hello and even taking messages. I was immodestly congratulating myself on being a real whiz at this childrearing scene.

Then one day the phone rang, and I heard our son answer it, pause, and say, "Mommy will have to call you back, Gramma Stahl. She had too much medicine last night and she's busy throwing up."

Child's Eye View Of Hazardous Home

Ten children are accidentally poisoned every day in British Columbia, says poison control expert Miss Gillian Willis.

Of the 4,400 accidental poisonings reported in this province in the first six months of this year, half had pre-schoolers as their victims. Two-year-olds, described by Miss Willis as "the most adventurous age group" are the most poison-prone, according to statistics.

Miss Willis, of the University of British Columbia's faculty of pharmacy, was speaking at a consumer's forum on hazardous products in the home, held Wednesday at Camosun College.

Of the remaining 50 per cent of poisonings, 40 per cent are suicides of older people and the remainder involve drug abuse among younger persons.

In a series of slides, Miss Willis took the audience through a child's eyeview trip around the average home. Under the sink, he finds the bleaches, floor polishes and disinfectants. In the unlocked bathroom cabinet, the pills and creams he so often thinks are candies.

Even a woman's purse can be a potential source of tragedy. Miss Willis quoted a case in Nanaimo, three weeks ago, in which an 18-month-old baby died after ingesting his grandmother's anti-depressant pills. The child died three hours after swallowing the pills left in the grandmother's purse.

"Don't store medications, flush them down the toilet," Miss Willis warned, adding that any medications should be kept locked and out of children's reach.

"Protecting people in my job," said Mr. E. H. Bauer, product inspector for the federal government's Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

Bauer described the Hazardous Products Act as falling into two parts — that involving goods that are banned outright in Canada, like cellouse nitrate spectacle frames (which have a high fire risk) and toys that give off more than 100 decibles — and goods that are permitted, if they meet with the act's conditions.

The second category includes a wide variety of items, from toy steam engines to glazed ceramics, aerosol cans to adhesives. Newest addition to this list is safety matches.

From January 1973 onwards, the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs will have standards to control the manufacture of matches so that they will not ignite accidentally or glow too long after being extinguished.

Despite advances made in some areas, Bauer admits that his department has not yet got the full control over hazardous products. Many pesticides and insect repellents, for example, are registered by their manufacturers through the department of agriculture so as to avoid the labelling demanded by the Hazardous Products Act, he said.

Wednesday's forum was co-sponsored by the Consumers' Association of Canada and Camosun College's community services division.

Hazardous Label May Appear on Test Kits

Federal authorities plan to ask the manufacturer of an "environmental test kit" to warn buyers that misuse may endanger their health, the Times learned Wednesday.

Tests by Victoria pathologist Dr. G. A. Montessori revealed last week that bacteria causing dangerous diseases can be grown by children using the kit's materials.

Mr. E. H. Bauer, Pacific Region administrator of the Hazardous Products Act for the department of consumer and corporate affairs, said that the standards branch in Ottawa will suggest kits be labelled as "harmful unless used under strict supervision."

He said that federal authorities would inform the Toronto manufacturer of the decision.

The kits, now withdrawn from sale by all but one local toy department, are considered a health hazard by regional and provincial health officers.

Grew Well

Bacteria that grew well on the kit's nutrient pad included staphylococcus aureus (a germ causing boils), chigella (a bacillus causing diarrheal, and salmonella, which causes diseases ranging from diarrhae to typhoid.

Tom Vernon, president of the Canadian branch of the company making the kits, said in a telephone interview Wednesday that he "can't understand the logic of what these doctors are doing."

He agreed that the kit's nutrient pad would help dangerous as well as harmless bacteria to multiply, but "this just proves the kit works."

Health authorities, he said, "should go after the pollution, not the kit that proves pollution exists."

Vernon pointed out that the kit "is an educational set, not a toy." It is recommended for use by children at least 10 years of age, working under adult supervision.

He estimated that his company has distributed about 18,000 kits in Canada since April, with "excellent support from schools across the country."

"We're trying to highlight pollution and get something done about it," he said.

"Nobody has questioned the kits before. It's our understanding that they conform to the hazardous products legislation."

Vernon said he would get in touch with the standards branch and remove the kit from the market if it proves to be "a really dangerous product."

Barry Oake, commodity buyer at the Toronto head office of the T. Eaton Company, said he had received word about the kit's potential health hazard from the company's Victoria branch.

"We have asked a Toronto doctor to repeat the tests performed in Victoria, and have contacted our research bureau and the manufacturer," Oake said.

Kits are on sale in 50 Eaton's stores across Canada, and can be ordered through all its catalogue offices.

Oake said that "it's up to the manufacturer either to refute the Times' stories or pull the product from the shelves.

"Eaton's is definitely concerned. We're taking action as quickly as possible."

Ron Sheering, assistant manager of Eaton's toy department in Victoria, said he could not remove kits from the shelves without permission from the Toronto head office.

"The item is included in the company's fall promotion from coast to coast," he said.

He has told staff to refuse to sell kits to children under 10, and to take back any returned to the store.

The Bay in Victoria has removed all kits from its shelves, and cancelled another order placed with the manufacturer.

'Trendy Idea'

Jim Wilson, the store's toy buyer, said the kits "sounded like a good trendy idea — but when you find out they can grow bacteria like that it's a different matter."

A survey by the Times indicates that only two other Victoria stores had offered the kit for sale.

Mrs. Dorothy Frederickson, manager of Toys and Wheels, said that she sent the kits back to the Vancouver warehouse "as soon as the Times' story appeared."

Windmill Toys and Gifts has withdrawn the kits from sale and asked the head office in Vancouver for advice.

100 Pounds Lighter, And Still More to Go . . .

Five foot tall Louise Kucher didn't really mind weighing 293 pounds when she lived back in Kindersley, Saskatchewan — and neither did her friends.

But this year Miss Kucher — now a 24-year-old bookkeeper in a wholesale store that specializes in potato chips and cakes — lost 100 pounds and gained a medal to prove it. She plans to lose another 70 within the next 18 months, to bring her to "her "personal ideal weight" of 120 pounds.

Having decided to diet, Miss Kucher says she didn't want "to live on lettuce leaves or carrot sticks." Nor did she believe in crash dieting. Diet pills she wouldn't recommend to anyone.

Through a friend, she heard of Take Off Pounds Sensibly (TOPS), weighed in at a chapter meeting one Tuesday evening at Margaret Jenkins School, and now says she's a member "for the rest of her life."

"I guess I've always had a weight problem," says Miss Kucher, who once took a size 48 but now slips into size 17 or 18. For her, the weekly meeting at Margaret Jenkins is essential therapy.

"You can go along and say 'I passed up an eclair today' — and know someone cares. Being able to tell someone you've had the willpower is half the battle."

"Potatoes and bread were my downfall," she confesses. They're out now from her daily diet, as are sweets and "all the other goodies."

She says being single makes slimming easier. Married women, having to cook for a family, are more exposed to food and its calorie temptations.

Despite personalized cooking and an eagle eye on calorie intake, however, Miss Kucher still has weeks when she puts on weight. Since joining TOPS in July 1971, she's had four gains.

"But they've never been more than two pounds," she adds.

By September 1971, she had taken off 100 pounds. This year, she received TOPS' gold "century" medallion, for keeping the hundred off for a full year.

"Once you reach a certain point, your weight stands still," she says. This plateau point is the most discouraging time for the dieter.

"Then something changes in your body and you start losing again."

Miss Kucher's membership in TOPS is no cupboard love affair, she says. Even if she were to reach her ideal 120 pounds within a year, she would still remain true to TOPS.

"With slimming, reaching the goal isn't the end — it's keeping it off," she says.

Auxiliary Elects Head

Dr. Hendrik Gideonse takes 10-month-old son to college

'HUMANIZING' YOUR WORK

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dr. Hendrik Gideonse, a dean at the University of Cincinnati, takes his 10-week-old son to work with him and his wife drops in the office regularly to breast feed the baby.

"I just looked at my schedule and saw I'd be out three or four or five nights a week and said, 'Nuts. I'm not going to see my son only while he's sleeping in a dark crib,' " said the 36-year-old Gideonse, a dean of the College of Education.

Gideonse, a former researcher for the U.S. department of health, education and welfare, said his wife Sarah stops in on schedule the two days a week he takes the infant to the office to feed the baby.

Gideonse said a dominant theme in his studies has been the need to "humanize work so that it does not require such a complete separation from the values, needs and activities which fulfill people emotionally and aesthetically."

Complaints have been minimal, and college president Warren Bennis said his only concern is that Gideonse "give the taxpayers their money's worth."

Gideonse insists that he actually gets more work accomplished when the baby is with him.

Drug Coding Coming

OTTAWA — A much-delayed announcement of a federal drug coding scheme will likely be made by Federal Health Minister John Munro sometime before the election, officials in the health department say.

The drug coding scheme, approved in principle more than a year ago by pharmacists, drug manufacturers and federal officials, is intended to provide a quick and uniform method for identifying all prescription drugs.

This in turn should make it much easier to identify drugs involved in drug poisoning cases, perhaps lead to the saving of more lives from drug poisonings in Canada.

About half the poisonings in Canada each year involve drugs.

At the same time, governments are planning to use the drug recording scheme to simplify record-keeping of government-financed prescriptions being initiated in various provinces under welfare and medicare schemes.

In fact, Quebec is already using the federal coding scheme in computer processing of provincial payments for welfare prescriptions.

Nun, Ex-Marine Graduate As FBI's First Women

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The first two women FBI agents in history graduated Wednesday from a 14-week training course that included firearms use, physical fitness training and hand-to-hand combat.

"They passed all the requirements," an FBI spokesman said of Susan Lynn Roley, 25, a former U.S. marine lieutenant, and Joann Pierce, 31, a former nun.

Six more women are still in training and more than 50 others have applied to be agents since acting director L. Patrick Gray III relaxed the all-male policy May 12.

Miss Roley, a blue-eyed redhead from Laguna Beach, Clif., and Miss Pierce, a tall, slender brunette from Niagara Falls, N.Y., will graduate along with 45 male agents.

There will be no ceremonies at the FBI academy at Quantico, Va. Each new agent is simply given a coveted bronze badge and assigned to his or her first job in the 8,700-member force.

Gray has said they will do exactly the same job as their male counterparts. His predecessor, the late J. Edgar Hoover, thought the job too dangerous for women.

Posties Pastmasters At Handling Public

DEAR ABBY: I have been a postmaster in a small town for the last 24 years, so I'm not exactly a rookie. I read with amusement the letter from the postmaster's wife who was annoyed because someone had called her husband in the middle of his supper to ask how much postage to put on an airmail postcard.

I would like to address a few questions to her and to wives of other postmasters:

1. Have you ever been wakened at midnight by irate, drunken duck hunters who have made all provisions for a hunting trip, including booze, except for a hunting licence.

2. Have you ever been called at 10 p.m. on Sunday night and asked if a letter posted at 1 p.m. that day had left yet? I have.

3. Have you ever had to join the fire department in fighting a fire started in a mail box by someone who dropped alighted cigarette in the slot? I have.

4. Have you ever retrieved broken eggs, melting ice cream bars, and the contents of an entire soda bottle from a collection box, hoping that the contents of letters had not been damaged? I have.

5. Have you ever been called by a patron, furious because the vending machine did not return one penny in change? I have. — Cordially, Postmaster.

DEAR POSTMASTER: I've always known that postmasters were pastmasters at handling the public, but if you kept your cool through these kooky requests, you deserve a medal!

DEAR ABBY: Re that woman who found a library book on which she owed a $60.50 fine (it was three and a half years overdue!): She was foolish to worry about it. All she had to do was bring it back and explain the circumstances. I doubt if there is a librarian in the country who would have charged her more than the cost of the book — if that. — Modern Library

U of A TV Chief Quits in Disgust

EDMONTON (CP) — The director of the radio and television department is leaving the University of Alberta, citing wasted expenditures, poor direction from the administration and frustration in trying to dismiss incompetent staff.

Henry Mamet, who came to the university in 1967 after a lengthy career in radio and television production in the United States, said in an interview Tuesday his five years here were "the worst in my life."

Mamet, who left a Chicago production agency to take the position, said "all this time I've been trying to find out what the university is trying to do in educational television. I never could find out. The political situation on campus made it impossible, the empire building and everything."

Mother Won't Quit

CALGARY (CP) — The mother of a 29-year-old woman who died last month while suffering heroin withdrawal symptoms said Wednesday she "will not rest until something is done to bring justice" in the death of her daughter.

Margaret McKenzie said she was "angry, disappointed and sickened" by Attorney-General Merv Leitch's decision this week not to hold a judicial inquiry into the death of Jeanine McKenzie. The woman died Sept. 15 despite three trips to General Hospital in 48 hours, after each of which she was returned to jail.

Final Shipment

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — The final grain cargo of the season left this Hudson Bay port Tuesday when the Dutch freighter Hollendrecht sailed with 650,000 bushels of wheat and barley.

Her cargo brought total shipments to near 25 million bushels, short of last year's record of 25.9 million bushels.

Day Care Centre Pushed

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

DUNCAN — A day care centre is badly needed in the Cowichan Valley, says Margaret Mitchell, who has the only private kindergarten in this area.

Mrs. Mitchell, who has had her kindergarten since 1959, said a centre should be set up by the community so "everyone will be involved."

She is now in the process of approaching service clubs in the area to encourage them to sponsor the centre.

★ ★ ★

Mrs. Mitchell has seriously considered having her home, where her kindergarten is held, renovated to handle the required facilities but said "I don't feel I can take on the burden of a big loan to set up the environment although it is badly needed."

The Mitchell home on 1063 Nagle Street, Duncan, has 50 children that come five days a week in two separate sessions.

Mrs. Mitchell has no problem with space as she has raised six boys in the home.

To handle a day care center, Mrs. Mitchell would have to change the physical set up of her home to the nursery, day care and pre-school services regulations.

"I would then have to have a properly arranged sleeping area, proper kitchen facilities and toilet arrangements for very small children," she said.

Although a day care centre has been on Mrs. Mitchell's mind for many seasons, she said it became more emphasized last year when she had many parents ask if they could leave their child for the day.

"I became concerned", she said, "because many of the parents were separated and the children are jumped from nursery school, to a babysitter then to home Often after a day's work the mother is too tired to give much attention to the child."

Mrs. Mitchell feels it is important for children to be left in a good environment where they will get "good mental and intellectual care and stimulus as well as physical care."

"A day care centre offering these qualifications will be much better than just leaving the child at a babysitters. A proper day care or nursery should have good equipment and this also costs money," she said.

The centre is also badly needed for mothers who for their own emotional and mental health, need to get out into the community more.

"I don't feel they should sluff off their responsibility but often the other just has to get out of the home" Mrs. Mitchell said. "I think a child needs tender loving care and guidance, from both parents, until at least three years of age — unless the economic situation is such that both have to work."

Mrs. Mitchell feels the whole community should become involved in the problem now where "it is important to see that children get the proper treatment and training" rather than when many are sent to reform school when it is really too late.

"A child needs love. Not the gushy stuff but discipline with a firm hand. It takes real love to say no to a child," she said.

Contract Awarded

EDMONTON (CP) — A Vancouver company has been awarded a contract to build airline passenger loading bridges to be installed in Edmonton, Calgary and Winnipeg.

The $400,000 contract was awarded by Air Canada for three loading bridges to be used primarily for the Lockheed 1011 Tristar which Air Canada is to put into service next spring.

The loading bridges will also be adjustable to serve the company's Boeing 747s, and DC8s and DC9s.

They were designed by Davanac Industries of Vancouver and will be manufactured by Ebco Industries of Vancouver. They are to extend from the passenger terminal to the aircraft, protecting passengers from the weather.

Funeral Friday For Ex-Alderman

DUNCAN — Funeral services will be held Friday morning for long-time Cowichan Valley resident and former alderman Henry Murphy, 79, who died here Tuesday.

Prayers will be offered at 7:30 this evening at Hirst Funeral Chapel while the funeral will be held at 10 a.m. Friday at St. Ann's Church, Tzouhalem Road, Duncan.

Murphy, who was born in Lowell, Mass., came to Calgary as a child. He homesteaded in the Peace River District before coming to the Cowichan council in 1947.

He was predeceased by his first wife Blanche and son Patrick.

Murphy is survived by his wife Jean, son John, of Mill Bay, two daughters, Esther Lilligard, of Crofton, Doreen Clements, of Duncan, sister Mrs. James Charters, of Victoria, and brother Rev. Donald Murphy, of Vancouver.

Also suriviving Murphy are 15 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren.

STROM
. . . age main reason

EDMONTON (CP) — Harry Strom, a quiet-spoken former rancher who assumed leadership of Alberta's Social Credit party four years ago, stunned the legislature Wednesday with his announcement that he intends to resign as opposition leader.

But although Mr. Strom will be handing over the party reins to someone else, he won't be getting out of the saddle. He'll continue to sit as the member for Cypress, a rural riding in the rolling grassland of southeastern Alberta.

The main reason for his decision, he said, was his age. He's 58 and will be at least 60 when it's time for the next provincial election—too old, he felt, for the job.

"It's not an unknown fact that I intended to step down," he said later outside the house, commenting on published speculation that began when his government was toppled by Peter Lougheed's Progressive Conservatives in August, 1971.

In that contest, the Conservatives took 49 of the 75 seats in the Legislature while Social Credit, which had governed the province for 35 years, took only 24. The New Democratic Party won the other seat. Mr. Strom suffered another setback when Dan Bouvier broke ranks and decided to sit as an independent for Lac la Biche-McMurray last May in the first sitting of this, the 17th session.

Just who will take over the reins isn't clear but there are several prospects, including 62-year-old Gordon Taylor whose record in the house belies his age.

A vigorous man who is tenacious in the heat of debate, Mr. Taylor admitted he would like to succeed Mr. Strom but preferred to be drafted, saying "my services are available if anybody wants them."

Mr. Taylor, a former highways minister under Mr. Strom and former premier Ernest C. Manning who was appointed to the Senate in 1970, has been the member for Drumheller for 32 years and shows no signs of slowing down.

Other possiblities are Robert Clark, 35, a former education minister who is the member for Olds-Didsbury, and Ray Speaker, 36, a former minister of health and social development whose Little Bow riding borders on Cypress.

Mr. Strom, however, has no favorites for a successor.

"I am not going to be expressing any personal preference," he said outside the house. "I think it would be, wrong for me to do it."

CONVENTION EXPECTED

A leadership convention is expected to be held in conjunction with the 1973 meeting of the provincial party Feb. 1-3 at Edmonton. That's the time preferred by Mr. Strom, who'll retain the leadership until then, and by William Johnson, president of the Social Credit League of Alberta.

ART BRINGS RECORD PRICES

NEW YORK (AP) — Vincent Van Gogh drawings and works of five other artists attracted record auction prices in a $5-million sale Wednesday night at Sotheby Parke-Bernet Galleries here.

The Van Gogh drawing, Cabanes a Saintes-Maries, was sold to an anonymous private collector from Los Angeles for $95,000, breaking the old record for his drawings of $74,000.

Record prices also were registered for works of Max Ernst, Ben Nicholson, Jean DeBussy, Nicholas De Stael, and sculpture by Antoine Pevsner.

The 81 paintings in the auction sold for a total of $5,025,500, with the top single price of $460,000 going for Blanchisseuses Portant du Linge, by Edgar Degas, bought by an anonymous European buyer.

Tipoff Calls Worry IRA

BELFAST (AP) — Security forces in Northern Ireland are expanding their telephone tipoff network for anonymous informers.

The system already has led to the capture of several alleged Irish Republican Army officers and guerrilla weapons dumps.

Sir Graham Shillington, head of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, said the confidential phones in Belfast, Londonderry and other cities were proving an effective weapon against terrorism.

Before the network was established, security forces found it difficult to glean intelligence from Roman Catholic areas in the province where the IRA is entrenched.

The guerrillas are known to kill informers.

SAYS IRA WORRIED

Shillington said the IRA now is getting "extremely worried" by the amount of information reaching the police and army.

The tipoff network now will have eight telephone numbers where information can be given anonymously.

In a night of sporadic violence in the North, a civilian was shot in the leg by a sniper who fired from a speeding car in Belfast's Antrim Road area. The man's condition was not serious.

British troops fired at two gunmen in the Ardoyne district of the capital and said they hit one.

The British army said it had found more guns, ammunition and explosives in Protestant areas than Catholic enclaves in searches during the last week.

Increasing activity among Protestant militants has led to more stringent army searches in their strongholds.

Protestant leader Rev. Ian Paisley Wednesday night urged Britain to integrate Northern Ireland fully with the rest of the United Kingdom. This would mean no restoration of the currently-suspended protestant-dominated provincial parliament in the North.

In the Irish republic, Prime Minister Jack Lynch announced that a referendum will be held soon to discover whether the Irish people are willing to end the privileged position of the Catholic Church in the state. He mentioned Nov. 30 as a possible date.

Earlier this year, William Cardinal Conway, Primate of all Ireland, said he would "not shed a tear" if the clause in the constitution guaranteeing the Roman Catholic Church a special place was dropped.

Canada 'Unjust'

BRIGHTON, England (Reuter) — Sussex University accused Canada today of injustice in refusing a visa and work permit for Hungarian-born philosopher Istvan Meszaros, who has been offered a senior professorship at York University in Toronto.

The senate of the English university also agreed to offer Prof. Meszaros, who was a lecturer at Sussex until last month, a permanent post should he wish to return there.

Meszaros is in Canada, attempting to fight his case, following the Canadian government's decision to refuse him a visa and work permit, and a rejection of an appeal lodged by the Hungarian-born academic.

The senate's statement described Meszaros, who specializes in Marxist philosophy, as "a reputable scholar of international distinction."

Here's the biggest color TV Panasonic has ever made...with a picture so big, so bright, so crisp, so steady, so true-to-life, you'd think it was a movie screen! The secret is in the sensational Pana-Matrix tube. Every color spot is surrounded by black for maximum contrast, maximum color purity. Panalock AFT and Self-Set Color give instant color tuning. In two models: Mediterranean-style Seneca CT-262C (shown) in dark oak veneers, and the contemporary Brant CT-260C, in walnut veneers.

When Ben Hur and Cleopatra come into your home, we don't want them to act off color.

We want everyone you watch to show their true colors. That's why all these new Panasonic color TVs have two tuning systems. One is called Panalock AFT. A single touch tunes the set to the best possible picture. No more fiddling adjustments when you switch channels. The other button is a Panasonic exclusive called Self-Set Color. A touch on the SSC button automatically adjusts color and tint to built-in factory standards. No more struggles with color and tint controls—though they're there if you want to use them.

Every Panasonic color TV has something special going for it. Read about some of them here...then visit your Panasonic dealer. He can show you Panasonic color in diagonal screen sizes from 13" to 26".

The Franklin—it turns to keep you in the picture. Unique engineering from Panasonic. The 20" diagonal screen unit swivels on its control base, so the screen can face you wherever you're sitting. Easy-to-use slide controls, plus Panalock AFT and Self-Set Color. The Franklin CT-394C.

The Amandale—a compact beauty with great performance. Small as it is, this 17" diagonal Pana-Color TV has everything that makes the Panasonic color picture so great. Slide lever controls, Panalock AFT and Self-Set Color. It's styled to suit any decor. A great second set! The Amandale CT-606C.

The East Hampton—luxury in a mid-size set. Not many 19" diagonal color TVs have so many quality features. Walnut cabinet, slide-lever controls, illuminated channel indicator, and of course Panalock AFT and Self-Set Color. The East Hampton CT-98DC.

Underground Life Means Longer Days

NEW YORK (NYT) — A French specialist in cave research, after remaining isolated underground for 205 days in Texas, has found that, for reasons unknown, his body rhythm sometimes doubled its rate.

Most of the time, without clues to the passage of day and and night, he fell naturally into a sleep-wake cycle of 25 to 28 hours. But for two periods of about two weeks each he unconsciously jumped to cycles of 45 to 50 hours.

These did not occur in succession, but at intervals of two and three days, with normal sleep-wake cycles in between.

In an interview the speleologist, Michael Siffre, said he had no firm awareness of these "long" days, since he was cut off from all time indicators. However, in preparing his journal, he did notice that on some such days he had done an extraordinary amount of work.

To monitor the various forms of bodily rhythm he wore sensors to record heartbeat, electrical brain activity (while asleep) and rectal temperature. Urine samples were collected since they provide clues to various diurnal cycles in body chemistry.

On arising each "day" Siffre saved his beard clippings for weighing by researchers in human periodicity at the University of Minnesota. This phase of his research is a follow-up to report by a British researcher that his rate of beard growth was affected by sexual deprivation and anticipation.

The researcher, who was studying the role of the male hormone testosterone in stag behavior on an isolated island off Scotland, suspected that his beard was heavier on Fridays, before he returned to the mainland. He placed the daily clippings in numbered envelopes for weighing by others and confirmed the effect.

His report in Nature is apparently the only anonymous communication ever to have been published in that highly respected journal.

To establish his normal cycles Siffre's monitoring began before he went into the cave, 150 feet underground in Del Rio, Tex., on Feb. 14. He left the cave Sept. 5.

For a decade Siffre has been conducting such experiments, with himself and volunteers as subjects. He uses caves as the most economical and reliable way to isolate people from such day-night cues as temperature cycles.

In Texas, his activities were monitored, electronically, by colleagues on the surface, including the time when he turned on a special lamp, simulating the sun, on awaking, and when he turned it off, before going to sleep.

The special fluorescent light was provided by the Duro-Test Corporation. The Marriott Corporation provided him with frozen, precooked meals, similar to those devised for space flights.

While medical specialists in the American space program have followed Siffre's work with interest, they were not sponsors of the project, which had some support from the French government and other contributors.

For several years, Siffre has argued that some individuals, isolated from day-night cues (as they would be on long space flights) fall naturally into a 48-hour rhythm. In such a cycle, he says, they require only a little more sleep than for a 24-hour period, making for a substantial increase in net work time.

He says he is not such a person and, during a long stay underground in 1962, he spontaneously settled into a cycle of "days" of only 24 hours each. Why, in the recent experiment, he sometimes doubled the period is uncertain, he said. He suspects, however, that it may be related to the fact that, at 33, he is a decade older.

Horses Killed By Youths 'Having Fun'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police say three teen-agers arrested Tuesday in the deaths of two horses which were pelted with chunks of concrete and hit with a nail-studded board explained they were "just having fun."

The two horses killed Saturday night were found entangled with one another.

Authorities said 25 horses in a ramshackle stable were beaten. Three horses were injured seriously.

Police Lieut. Kenneth Schwartz said the horses had been stoned for two hours. He said two ponies apparently had died of exhaustion in frantic efforts to escape their attackers.

Carl Hardy, 17, Jerry Kitrell, 16, and Reginald Peterson, 16, all of Philadelphia, were charged with malicious mischief, vandalism, cruelty to animals and wilful killing and maiming of animals.

Fashion King Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Superb tailoring and enduring style were the trademarks of clothes by Norman Norell, the award-winning dean of American fashion designers who died Wednesday. He was 72.

Norell suffered a stroke Oct. 15, the day before the Metropolitan Museum of Art exhibited a collection of his designs during the last 15 years.

Elegant entertainment stars and other celebrities treasured their Norell coats and suits and dramatic evening clothes, particularly the famous long sequined gowns.

But the man whose clothes are frequently referred to as the "Rolls-Royce of the fashion industry" felt the demand for his kind of workmanship and styles fading.

"In 10 or 15 years there will be even less demand than today for quality," he said recently. "The kids won't miss it. They never knew it."

Born in Noblesville, Ind., the son of a haberdasher named Levinson, Norman came to New York at age 19 to study art. He was designing costumes for Rudolph Valentino and Gloria Swanson by the time he was 22.

He teamed up with Anthony Traina in 1941 and for nearly 20 years Traina-Norell designs were a fashion byword, creating an atmosphere of prestige that helped make New York worthy of comparison with Paris as a design centre. He was an instant success in his own business after Traina retired in 1960.

Over the years, his clients included entertainment stars Lauren Bacall, Carol Channing and Dinah Shore, and other celebrities.

His dresses sold for about $4,000, his coats and suits from $1,600 to $2,100 and a simple jersey dress for $500.

Hanrahan Conspiracy Rejected

CHICAGO (WP) — Cook County State's attorney Edward Hanrahan and 13 other law-enforcement officers were acquitted Wednesday of charges that they conspired to obstruct an investigation of the raid that killed two Black Panthers here nearly three years ago.

Cook County circuit judge Philip Romiti ruled that a special prosecutor had failed to present evidence of a conspiracy and directed the verdict of acquittal from the bench before a packed courtroom.

The family and friends of Hanrahan and his co-defendants burst into applause. A smiling Hanrahan later contended that the ruling vindicated the police who conducted the raid.

Romiti said he was not judging the conduct of the police officers who, early on the morning of Dec. 4, 1969, burst into a Black Panther apartment and killed Fred Hampton and Mark Clark. That issue was not before the court, he said.

The indictment had charged that Hanrahan, his top assistant and 12 policemen had conspired to obstruct justice during the investigation of the raid in order to protect the raiders from prosecution. It charged that they conspired to "plant false evidence and furnish false information" as part of a cover-up.

Posse Nabs Speeding Zebra

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A posse of police cars finally rounded up a speeding zebra on the Bayshore Freeway to the amazement of the commuters heading home from San Francisco.

Redwood City police got a call Tuesday evening that the zebra had escaped from nearby Marine World and Africa U.S.A. and was trotting toward the Bayshore Highway.

A chase of 40 minutes along six miles of highway and side roads followed with the zebra at one point being clocked at 45 miles per hour — in a 35 mph zone.

The terrified animal then partially demolished the car, kicking in two doors, a fender, and chewing up part of the steering wheel. It also climbed on the hood and pounded it with its hoves and bit two handlers.

But today the zebra, whose means of escape remains a mystery, was back home.

JERRY RUBIN hasn't mellowed in his views on U.S. politics, despite the title of the book he co-authored with fellow street demonstrators Abbie Hoffman and Ed Sanders. Subject of the book is how the ballot-box receipt for change may be short-lived.

Capture Ends 'Skipper' Dream Trip

COPENHAGEN — A ship's cook who took a Danish trawler and beat North Sea gales to sail home singlehanded from Scotland was taken off the vessel today.

Blaavand shipping radio said the cook, 28-year-old Joergen Christiansen, was picked up by the fishing boat Star Dust off the Jutland port of Thyboroen.

Christiansen headed out to sea Sunday night aboard the 122-ton trawler Nordkap, leaving his captain and fellow crew members stranded in the Scottish port of Aberdeen.

His mother said he may have taken the trawler because he has always longed to become a skipper himself. But faulty eyesight had prevented him from becoming an officer.

MUSEKGON, Mich. — Frank Mankewicz, George McGovern's national political director, missed a campaign appearance here Wednesday night when the car he was riding in was stopped for speeding.

"I was just napping in the back seat," Mankiewicz said later in Detroit. "The next thing I knew police lights were flashing." The car was stopped on Interstate 96 in Muskegon County. Driver Ellen Wessel, 21, a New York campaign worker assigned to Muskegon, was ticketed for going 94 miles per hour in a 70 m.p.h. zone.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The management at Harlow's Nightclub, which is closed for the winter, has considerately left prospective burglars an open letter tacked to its door.

"Dear burglar," it reads. "We have removed all sound equipment and all fixtures. There is nothing here but the paint on the bare walls. Please wait until we open in May. Harlow's."

TORONTO — Aline Gregory, 42, feminist candidate in Toronto Rosedale for the Oct. 30 federal election, was thrown down on a driveway by a man as she tried to put up an election placard Wednesday night.

She was bruinsed on both arms and went to a hospital for x-rays.

"It never would have happened if she had been a man," her secretary said.

Nuts Need Drying Before Storage

The walnuts and filberts you gather and pick this fall will mature perfectly by the Christmas season, forming just one of the delightful surprises for your visitors.

Some of the other items of home grown food are left in the ground for storage, but nuts require to be thoroughly dried on the surface before putting them away.

If this has been neglected, and you have stored your filberts and walnuts without drying, bring them out for a close inspection. Crack a random nut or two for moisture content and flavor. The shells may have a trace of mould, a sure sign they are not dry.

★ ★ ★

Spread the nuts in a layer on cookie sheets or trays in a room at 65 to 70 degs. F. or a bit higher. Ideally there should be a circulation of warm air around the nuts for several days in order to do a quick drying job.

Nylon net, or the old cotton net of onions bags is good for handling nuts for drying. Leave enough space in the bags to shake the nuts around frequently.

Parsnips, turnips, Jerusalem artichokes, Brussels sprouts, and others of the cabbage family remain in the garden until needed for the holiday meals, but winter squash must be stored in a dry warm place.

Warm in this instance means around 55 to 60 degs. F. in contrast to storage of root crops around 35 to 40 degs. F.

Apples some of the mid-season varieties like Cox's Orange store well just above freezing, 35 degs. F., while pears need slightly higher temperatures. Both these fruits need frequent checking by the home gardener for storage facilities in the modern home are seldom perfect.

If you have produce you want to serve at Christmas time, you may devise other methods of keeping it in good condition.

You may have frozen berries for delicious fruit desserts, and you may also have lots of green peas and beans, but something straight from the garden to the table will win all hearts at such a festive season as Christmas.

Don't forget to nurture the lettuce, spinach, swiss chard and American cress (Land Cress). These may need a slatted wooden cover as a slight protection later, or even the glass cover of the coldframe put over them.

Have a bit of fun now, planning how much of your own garden produce you can serve at your holiday meals.

With visitors from other provinces as well as your own family, you'll be the hit of the Christmas season.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

To a rubber-bridge player, today's deal would be a dull hand, for nothing more was involved than an overtrick at a vulnerable game contract. But the deal came up in a duplicate game, in which an overtrick can be worth as much as life itself. The top East-West score was secured by the pair whose play is described below.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♡ 10
◇ Q J 10 9 5

WEST
♠ 4 2
♡ Q 9 8 7 5 2
◇ A 3

EAST
♠ 10 9 8 6
♡ 6 4 3
◇ 8 6

SOUTH
♡ A K J
◇ K 7 4 2
♣ 10 9 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♣

It should be mentioned that the bidding leading to the ultimate three-notrump contract leaves much to be desired, but it is almost impossible to conceive of a bidding sequence that would lead to this optimum contract. If, instead of jumping to two notrump on his initial response, South had bid three diamonds, North would have rebid three spades. South would then surely have bid four diamonds, which North would have carried to five diamonds.

As can be observed, this contract would go down to defeat, since declarer would lose two clubs and the diamond ace. Thus we have another example of why all bridge players tend to stay away from minor suit game contracts.

At every table, South became the declarer at three notrump. At each table, except one, West's opening lead was the seven of hearts. It was then a routine matter for South to drive out the ace of diamonds, and end up with at least ten tricks (eleven tricks, if West, upon winning his ace of diamonds, did not then lead a club.)

But, at one table, West evidently had a hunch not to open a heart, choosing instead the five of clubs as his opening lead. When declarer put up dummy's jack of clubs, East made a fine play when he decided not to win the trick with his queen. Instead, he urged a continuation of the suit by playing his eight of clubs.

The queen of diamonds was led next, and West took his ace. He returned the four of clubs, and East now made three club tricks. Thus South made exactly three notrump, for the lowest North-South score on the deal, since every other South declarer made either one or two overtricks. And, conversely, our East-West defenders obtained the highest East-West score, since all the other East-West defenders allowed North-South to score either one or two overtricks.

Humane Societies Seek End to Wolf Control

MONTREAL (CP)— The Canadian Federation of Humane Societies Wednesday urged Premier Robert Bourassa to halt Quebec's wolf control program "before cruelty to animals becomes identified with the image of Quebec."

Alex MacLaurin, president of the federation, said he is "shocked and appalled by the plans for this unnecessary slaughter."

"The idea of rewarding the first 50 successful hunters with the lower jaw of a wolf imbedded in an acrylic block is positively barbaric."

Both types of wolf prevalent in Quebec are safeguards and not menaces, he said. The big timber wolf keeps the deer herds strong by killing off the unfit and the smaller bush wolf preys on destructive rodents.

The federation president said he has received complaints from Britain, United States, and across Canada about the program now in effect for one month.

Every House a 'Star' in Hollywood Ads

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) —Ads from the Hollywood Reporter:

"STAR'S ESTATE. An acre of Beverly Hills on Hartford Way. Charming colonial, four bedrooms, maid's, library, game room, paddle tennis, court, pool . . ."

These are typical offers in the real estate sections of the movie trade papers, which advertise "star's homes" at prices up to $550,000. The casual reader might suspect a mass exodus of film stars.

It's not that bad. Nearly every grand house in Beverly Hills has had a star owner or tenant during its history, and real estate salesmen understand the value of being able to say, "Lana Turner slept here."

But the truth is that fewer and fewer stars are making their homes in the high-rent district of Bel Air and Beverly Hills.

Richard Boone, a Los Angeles native, sold his Bel Air house eight years ago and moved to Hawaii. Now he is a resident of St. Augustine, Fla. He comes here only for his NBC mini-series, Hec Ramsey, and other acting assignments.

"I don't like Southern California," he says. "I like to get away from Hollywood and acquire a fresh approach."

Robert Redford lives near Provo, Utah, at a winter resort he is developing. Like Richard Boone, Mickey Rooney chooses to make his home in Florida.

Loretta Young and Dick Van Dyke reside in Arizona, and Van Dyke performed his television series at a studio near Phoenix. When not working in a film, Marlon Brando lives in Tahiti, where he plans to develop an island as a resort and laboratory to develop food sources.

Raymond Burr spends his time away from Ironside at his new home on a Fiji island. Frank Sinatra turned his back on the Los Angeles smog to retire in Palm Springs, Calif., where Red Skelton, Phil Harris and other stars have permanent homes.

Former Dean Speaks Here

The Very Rev. Gonville A. French-Beytagh, former dean of Johannesburg, South Africa, whose civil rights activities gained him world fame, will speak in Christ Church Cathedral Nov. 9 at 8 p.m.

Now living in London, England, Beytagh is on a three-week tour of Canada talking about his experiences in South Africa.

Beytagh was arrested several years ago by Johannesburg police for his anti-apartheid policies and actions. Charged with unlawful activities including distributing pamphlets calling for guerrilla warfare and participating in terrorist activities, he was eventually cleared in the Supreme Court.

FREE INTEREST FOR ONE ENTIRE YEAR!

YES, YOU READ THAT RIGHT. We are offering you a stereo with no interest or charges for one entire year. WE WILL PAY THE INTEREST FOR YOU. No tricks or gimmicks either — this is a legitimate offer.

ANY PACKAGE ON THIS PAGE QUALIFIES for this incredible opportunity, but only till the end of October. Come in right away and hear these top values.

OUR NEWEST $359 PACKAGE

For less than $400 you might not expect top quality sound. The Sansui 210 AM/FM receiver has 34 watts of power and useful features like separate bass and treble controls. It even has a loudness switch for accurate listening at low volumes and the 210 even has tape recorder facilities. Previously marked at $199.95 including a walnut case. A dynamically balanced platter might not turn you on, but your records will sound better. The B.S.R. 4-speed turntable includes base and cover and magnetic cartridge and was previously marked at $99.95. The BSR includes exotic features like low-mass tone-arm, anti-skate control and cue control for longer life and better record sound. Electra ED10X speakers have a 10-inch woofer in a three-way system. They have a separate midrange and tweeter for true accurate overall sound. But you don't have to tell your friends all that. They will look great on your bookshelves or whatever. The ED10X's were previously marked at $158.90 a pair including plenty of wire.
You will be able to fool your friends into thinking you paid a full $100 more than our $359 package price.

Package Price Includes Full Manufacturer's Warranty

A NO-NONSENSE MUSIC PACKAGE

This package is simply an outstanding value. It includes the new Sansui 310 AM/FM receiver that is already outselling everything near its price. With 44 watts of power and a raft of features, it should be the most popular Sansui ever made. Its price is very reasonable, at $319.95, and our package discount price makes it more reasonable. Dual's newest changer is also destined to be their most popular ever. The CS16 module comes with a Dual 1214 with a four-pole motor, a Shure M75 magnetic cartridge, a custom base and tinted dust cover. Its marked price of $124.50 would seem to be a good value and our package discount price means you pay even less than that. Ultimate speakers are new on the market and they should be our most popular big speaker. They have a 12-inch woofer which is much bigger than most systems near this price range. The ultimate's LSP305's are two feet high and finished in walnut all around. At $69.95 each you probably couldn't find a better value. The marked prices add up to $584.35. At that price you would be getting a good value. Our package price chops $135 off that to make it an outstanding value. No-nonsense sound.

Package Price Includes Full Manufacturer's Warranty
Sansui Dual Sansui ULTIMATE | PREV. MARKED TOTAL $584.35 | PACKAGE Saving $135 | ONLY $449 | $43 A MONTH

Only $599 for our Newest Sansui Package

Our newest package includes a Sansui 350A AM/FM receiver with 54 watts of power, enough for two speaker systems. It has an excellent FM tuner section, ample control features and a real walnut case. The 350A was previously marked at $369.95.
Elac is well known for building high quality automatic record changers. Their model 620 was recently rated very highly by a leading consumer magazine. It has all the features such as gentle cuing and smooth mechanical operation. With walnut base, tinted cover and $44.95 Empire magnetic cartridge, the Elac was previously marked at $169.90. Sansui's newest speaker is the model AS100. The "AS" means that it is modern "acoustic suspension" design. The AS100 speakers have a 10-inch woofer for deep bass and a three-inch tweeter for clear high notes, and have a removable front grille board.

Package Price Includes Full Manufacturer's Warranty

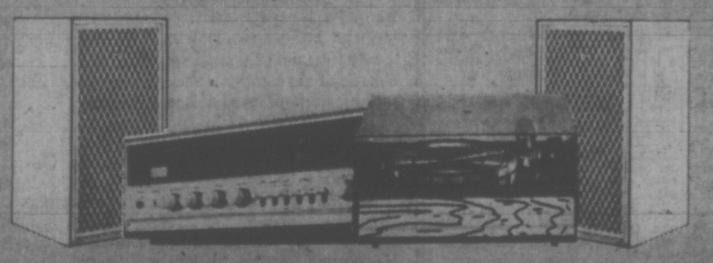
PACKAGE PRICE INCLUDES ONE YEAR'S FREE INTEREST

FOR MUSIC LOVERS ONLY


The Sansui 1000X AM/FM receiver delivers 100 watts of power — enough for two speaker systems. It has an excellent and sensitive AM/FM stereo tuner section which sounds good almost anywhere, and in addition to providing a goodly amount of power, it is one of the most convenient to use receivers you're likely to find. As for value, there's nothing else at its price that even begins to compete in terms of features, performance and styling, previously marked at $449.95 including a walnut case.
Dual's 1216 turntable has tonearm suspension that provides the most friction-free tracking, plus a tracking angle selector for single or stack playing, plus all the other features that make Dual a connoisseur's choice. We supply it with a walnut base, tinted cover and an Empire cartridge with elliptical diamond stylus. Previously marked at $199.95.
The Sansui SP70's are unusual in that they actually sound better in a limited listening area than some larger and costlier speakers. They have a new aluminum domed woofer and a special domed tweeter for good overall sound. With beautiful walnut grille, the SP70's are an excellent speaker for their previously marked price of $299.90 a pair

Price Includes Manufacturers' Full Warranties

OUR BEST INTEREST-FREE PACKAGE

The Sansui 5000X AM/FM receiver has a full 200 watts of power and just about any feature you could imagine. It handles three pairs of speakers, two turntables, and four tape decks. Previously marked price is $639.95 which includes a real walnut case.
Elac is a West German company that builds fine turntables that have been highly rated by every stereo magazine. The Elac 50H was rated the best in the world last year. Elac has a new 1973 version of the 50H and they call it the 50H Mark II. It has all the regular Elac features, plus a built-in strobe to tell you the exact speed of the record. Add a beautiful walnut base, a tinted plexiglass dust cover, and a $44.95 Empire cartridge, and the previously marked prices total $269.90.
Sansui's biggest and best speaker in their new "AS" line is the AS300. Its twelve inch woofer, 6½ inch midrange, and three inch cone tweeter contribute to fantastic overall sound. Previously marked at $399.90 a pair.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Are Enemas Harmful?

As I have said here before, people write to ask me if enemas are as dangerous as they have heard. My answer is that some of my medical friends have had a horror of enemas, and have always told their patients never to take one, but I could never get from them a logical explanation for their great fear. About all some could say was that they feared an "enema habit" much as they feared a heroin habit.

Actually, after more than 60 years of busy practice, I cannot remember seeing anyone whose bowel was injured by enemas. A while ago an unusually well-preserved woman of 76 came into my office. When I first saw her as a patient some 30 years ago, she was sometimes taking three enemas in a day. They have done her no harm.

The ideal material to use in an enema bag is warm water, with a tablespoon of table salt added. Without salt, the plain water is irritating to the bowel and causes it to cramp painfully. With salt, the liquid is not irritating, and hence will flow in more easily — without producing so much cramping.

CONSTIPATION

The best hint I can give for avoiding constipation is to change from one bulk-producing food to another, perhaps every week, and then to change back again. For instance, I will eat four or six canned figs for breakfast every day for a week or 10 days. Then I will change to canned plums for a week or 10 days, and then I change back to canned figs.

The reason for changing is that if one sticks to one form of bulk producer, the large bowel can soon adapt to it, and then one can take a large amount of it without getting any laxative action.

If one is using a laxative, it is not a bad idea, again, to change occasionally from one type to another.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

Dock Workers Okay Contract

Shipyard workers in Victoria and Vancouver have voted in favor of a new two-year agreement with Burrard-Yarrows, it was announced today.

Counting of ballots showed approximately 75 per cent acceptance by the 22 union locals, which bargain jointly on behalf of 600 members at Yarrows and 800 members at Burrard.

The agreement, which was recommended by union negotiators, provides for a wage increase of 46 cents an hour this year and 42 cents an hour next year. Journeyman rate was $5.10 an hour.

In addition, annual vacations will be two weeks after one year's work, three weeks after four years, four weeks after 15 years and, next year, five weeks after 20 years. Previously it was two weeks after one year, three weeks after five years and four weeks after 20 years.

Jim McAvoy, president of the Victoria District and Vancouver Island Metal Trades Council, said negotiations were "carried out in a meaningful manner and the majority of people were satisfied with the recommendation of the committee."

Halloween Fun Fair Friday

Halloween starts early on the Saanich Peninsula with a Fun Fair in Deep Cove School, North Saanich, and a bonfire and fireworks display for Cubs and Scouts in Central Saanich, both on Friday evening.

Parents and students are involved in the three-hour fair, which starts at 7:30 p.m. at Deep Cove.

Victoria Cubs and those in all Peninsula packs have been invited to the Halloween party, starting at 7 at the home of Cubmaster Ron Gibson, 6539 Welch Road.

On Tuesday, Oct. 31, neighborhood children will be treated to costume parades, fireworks and refreshments in Central Saanich, Sidney and North Saanich.

The Saanichton Community Club, assisted by Central Saanich firemen, will host youngsters in the Agricultural Hall, 7:30 p.m.; Sidney children will gather at Tulista Park for hot dogs, costume competition and bonfire Tuesday evening, sponsored by the Recreation Commission; North Saanich firemen will arrange a Halloween party for local children at the Deep Cove fire hall.

Saanich Voters Near 32,000

Eligible voters for Saanich municipal election in December are up 485 from a year ago and are expected to total nearly 32,000 after the list is revised Nov. 1.

Returning officer Gordon Hayward said voluntary registration, aided by public service booths set up in shopping centres by the Association of Women Electors, was down compared to last year.

After the court of revision in 1971 the final total of eligible voters in Saanich was 31,386, which Hayward concedes was exceptional for new registrations.

Following the Oct. 2 deadline for voter registration this year, the total was 31,871. New owner elector registrants increased by 677, which Hayward regards as average, and new resident electors declined by 197, compared with a year ago.

This year's court of revision is expected to add 50 or more additional names to the list, mostly through examination of tax records evolving from property transactions this fall.

EX-VICTORIAN HONORED

A former Victorian was among 25 persons invested Wednesday as Officers of the Order of Canada by Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener in Ottawa.

Maxwell Mackenzie was honored for his work as a former member of the Economic Council of Canada and chairman of the 1966 royal commission on security.

Ten prominent Canadians were also invested as Companions of the order.

They included former Ontario premier John Robarts, author Northrop Frye of Toronto and former diplomat Chester Ronning.

Field Trip Directory For Schools

A 42-page directory to assist elementary school teachers familiarize children with the community has been prepared by Sooke School District.

Alan Newberry, supervisor of elementary programs, said the guide was designed to amplify the usual class field trip into a more meaningful experience.

This could be by follow-up discussion, written reports, interviews, model-building or perhaps a teaching program oriented to the trip.

Among suggested excursions are visits to Pacific Biological Station, Cowichan Valley Forest Museum, oyster beds at Sooke, Sealand of the Pacific, Victoria Press Ltd., Goldstream salmon run, Witty's Lagoon, a sewage treatment plant and a mountain climb.

Along with 32 suggested nature and industrial classrooms, the manual contains advice on people to contact for making arrangements, cost of transportation or admission, obtaining maps, time required and other tips.

Food Co-Op Plan Opinions Differ

LANGLEY(CP) — Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi's announcement that the provincial government will soon present plans for food co-operatives in an attempt to combat rising food prices has sparked conflicting comment from supermarket spokesmen and the Consumers' Association of Canada.

Edward Smallenberg, retail division manager for Super-Valu stores Ltd., said that food prices in British Columbia are lower than in any other province.

Meanwhile, the CAC has welcomed Levi's announcement.

B.C. president Ruth Lotzkar said food co-ops could mean savings of as much as 15 to 20 per cent on food costs.

A spokesman for Canada Safeway Ltd., said his company welcomes the competition of food co-ops. He said Safeway can meet prices charged by co-ops, provided the goods are of the same quality.

Levi made the food co-op statement Tuesday in the B.C. legislature as he introduced the government's bill to bring a $200 guaranteed monthly income to B.C. senior citizens.

He said the move toward co-ops will "show the monopolies that B.C. is not going to stand by while prices go up and these people suffer a loss of income."

Man Dies at 106

BEAR BRANCH, Ky. (AP) — Edd Hollen, whose wife died six weeks ago after 83 years of marriage, was buried in the family plot near here Sunday. Hollen, who was 106, and his wife, the former Margaret Gray, who was 100, left 146 descendants. The family said the couple never were separated for even a week of their marriage.

Our two sexy Capris come so well equipped there's not much you can add.

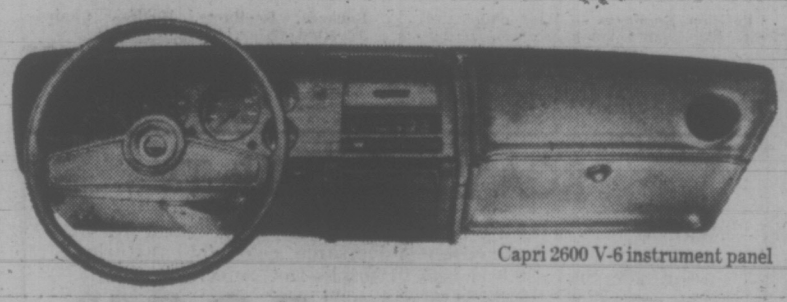
When you start to check Capri's long list of standard equipment it's not hard to see why it has become one of Canada's hottest-selling sports cars. Both the Capri 2000 and the Capri 2600 V-6 combine North American car comfort with European sports car flair. And they're loaded with features that some sports cars would call optional extras.

Radial ply tires are standard—for safer cornering, longer tread life and better traction in the wet and the dry. Rack and pinion steering is standard—for sensitive, precise control under all road conditions. Power-assisted front disc brakes are also standard. So is the MacPherson Strut front suspension system and the rear suspension sway bar for added stability. A short-throw, 4-speed manual floor shift, an electric rear window defroster and 2-speed windshield wipers are more standard features.

And, there's more. Like styled steel wheels, an energy-absorbing bumper system with bumper guards (front and rear), a mounted side-view mirror and dual headlamps.

Under the hood, the Capri 2000 has a very peppy and very economical 4-cylinder, 2-litre overhead cam engine. The Capri 2600 V-6 comes with a gutsy 2.6 litre V-6 engine with overhead valves, automatic choke and a larger clutch. It also sports dual exhausts, larger brakes and a beefed-up suspension system.

Capri 2600 V-6 standard interior



Capri 2600 V-6 instrument panel

Inside both Capris, you'll find reclining 5-position front bucket seats with headrests; a Flow-Thru ventilation system; a high-output heater/defroster with 2-speed blower; seat and shoulder belts with a built-in warning system; front hinged rear quarter windows; deep-pile carpeting; an inside hood release; a lockable glove compartment; even a cigarette lighter. Both the 2000 and the 2600 V-6 have sporty instrument panels with a woodgrain finish. But the 2600 V-6 includes full rallye instrumentation with 7,000 rpm tachometer, trip odometer, ammeter and oil pressure gauge.

Now you know what we mean by well equipped. And, that's why there are only a few luxury options you can add to either model: • Special Decor Group Option Package • AM radio • Automatic transmission • Vinyl roof • Manual sunroof And two dealer installed accessories: • Air conditioning • AM/FM radio.

The best way, though, to experience everything Capri has to offer is to see and drive the 2000 or 2600 V-6 at your Mercury dealers.

Voters Must Take Twist To Give Hellyer Victory

By JOHN LeBLANC

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Hellyer has steered about as zigzag a course as anyone in recent Canadian political history, and one more twist comes up on election day.

The voters of Toronto Trinity, who have sent him to Parliament seven times as a Liberal, now find him on the ballot as a Progressive Conservative. Since they last met him at the polls, he also has been founder-leader of a grouping called Action Canada.

The compass will swing all the way around should tall, personable Mr. Hellyer be elected and the Conservatives reach power. For the 49-year-old candidate, who has held two major portfolios in Liberal administrations, undoubtedly would be called into leader Robert Stanfield's cabinet.

Trinity is the focus of considerable attention from political connoisseurs for another reason beyond the Hellyer national status. It should do something to settle the perpetually intriguing problem—at least to the backroom boys—of whether the electorate votes for the candidate or the party.

However, there are some factors in Trinity, located in westcentral Toronto, that could serve to blur a clear-cut decision on this point. One is that the 81,000 persons in the riding are largely "ethnic"—26,000 Italians alone—making it a far from representative Canadian voting bloc.

Another complication is that Mr. Hellyer is running against a Liberal woman, the only one the governing party has nominated in 88-seat Ontario.

She is Aideen Nicholson, a career woman in the social field who has never before run for office but who has already demonstrated that she is an able and determined campaigner. Starting from scratch and with the help of only a handful of friends, Irish-born Miss Nicholson had to fight for the nomination in the face of a distinct lack of enthusiasm from the party establishment.

"I have no complaints against being unaided by the party brass—I think it's pretty well understood that candidates are on their own until they get the nomination," says Miss Nicholson, a former director of women's prisons for the Ontario government who is connected with several welfare institutions.

The only other candidate of the major parties in the field is Montreal-born Ed Boucher, 26, a New Democratic Party organizer who is distinctly an outsider. The NDP polled only about a third of Mr. Hellyer's 13,125 in 1968. For that matter, the Conservatives got less than half.

Other candidates are a regular Communist and a Maoist, who knock each other around as heartily as they do the more orthodox contestants, and who in any case can be counted on to scrape up only a few hundred die-hard votes.

Upper-level Liberals concede that the only way the entrenched Mr. Hellyer can be dislodged is by getting the electors to vote for the party rather than the candidate. For that reason appeals are geared to the Trudeau and Liberal labels, with the candidate running third.

But Mr. Hellyer says he thinks most of his old supporters have followed him to the Tory side and, in fact, that many of them deserted the Liberals before he did.

"Practically the whole of the old Liberal organization now is working for me," he adds. Campaign manager Ted Elliott was a Liberal party member for 20 years.

Mr. Hellyer says he has no cabinet commitment from Mr. Stanfield but "would expect, on the basis of my record, to be part of the government."

At 34, he was one of the youngest ministers in federal history as associate defence minister in the St. Laurent government. Later he was Lester Pearson's defence minister—responsible for the controversial unification of the armed forces—and in 1968 tried for the Liberal leadership against Pierre Trudeau.

He became Mr. Trudeau's transport minister with special responsibility for housing—his specialty in business—and quit the cabinet in 1969 over housing policies. He founded Action Canada as a pressure group dedicated to forcing changes in federal economic policies and it had several election candidates lined up when he jumped to the Conservatives last July.

Neither Mr. Hellyer nor his opponents think the switch, of itself, will affect the vote.

"There's been no great noticeable antagonism toward Paul switching," says Mr. Elliott, and Nicholson campaign manager Charlie Ross agrees.

Likewise, both camps say they don't look for any anti-feminine bias in the heavy vote of Europeans accustomed to male dominance in politics. Well over half Trinity's residents are Italians, Greeks, Portuguese, Germans, Ukrainians, Hungarians, French, Poles and Dutch.

Just as a safety factor, though, the Liberal will be on the ballot as A. Nicholson.

Race Driver School Breeds Champions

SNETTERTON, England (CP) — The racing drivers of tomorrow—they come from all over the globe—are learning the skills that may eventually make them world champions in this village in eastern England. They are pupils at the Jim Russell International Racing Drivers School.

Russell himself had a distinguished racing career and for 10 years regularly collected honors and trophies on British and European circuits.

Since he established his school in 1957 he has passed on the secrets of his success to trainee drivers from Canada, the United States and Asian countries.

Some of his pupils have gained international reputations. They include drivers such as Tetsu Ikuzawa from Japan; Frank Gardner of Australia, the 1971 European Formula 5000 champion; Jacques Couture of Montreal, 1971 Canadian National Formula champion; David McConnell of Montreal, Quebec Formula B champion; Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, and Mike de Udy, winner of the 1969 Springbok Drivers' Championship in Australia.

But despite the impressive honors list, John Paine, managing director and chief instructor, says: "We don't train champions—they emerge. What we emphasize is driver concentration, meticulous car preparation, detailed instruction, safety, accuracy and sympathy with the cars.

"We make it quite clear to our trainees that they are at the beginning of their careers. In fact the majority of pupils come here for their first lessons and we welcome people who just want to find out what it's like to handle a racing car. Full proficiency in driving an ordinary car is the only qualification required."

Intensive two-week training courses are organized eight times a year for overseas drivers. On the first day, all pupils complete their first lesson known as The Trial.

First lessons involve driving the car along a simple training circuit arranged so that pupils can easily become familiar with the driving controls and the general feel of a modern single-seat racing car.

The climax of the training program is the final day when pupils take part in a race meeting. Up to 80 drivers may be involved on race day—10 cars on the starting grid for eight separate events.

Although more than 10,000 pupils have received instruction at the school—individual lessons are given too—the £220 two-week course for overseas drivers was inaugurated only a few years ago.

Pipeline Major Project

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

EDMONTON (CP) — Dick Meeres, vice-president of Banister Pipelines Ltd., says a natural gas pipeline to the Mackenzie delta and Alaska will be the greatest challenge ever faced by the pipeline construction industry.

"It's a project that hasn't been equalled anywhere in the world," Mr. Meeres said, with special engineering, environmental, ecological and sociological problems.

The industry will have to cope with manpower availability and training, accommodation, equipment, financial resources, logistics, access, terrain, specialized design, climate and government regulations.

Perhaps the largest single factor, Mr. Meeres said, will be the enormous requirement for skilled manpower.

He said the skilled manpower in Canada isn't sufficient and about 1,000 of the 6,000 men who will be needed to build the line probably will have to come from outside the country.

The only alternative to the shortage, Mr. Meeres said, is adequate training programs for Canadians.

He said a significant number of native northerners might advantageously be employed on the project and special efforts and concessions must be made in their training and employment.

But because of safety and productivity considerations, few if any native northerners would qualify in the higher-skilled classifications. For this reason, training efforts should be limited to less specialized occupations most adaptable to future activities in the North.

Because productivity is tied to good morale, Mr. Meeres said, careful consideration must be given to the comfort, convenience and welfare of the work force.

Construction sites may be 1,000 miles or more away from a suitable source of food, fuel and supplies, which means that each camp must be entirely self-sufficient in water supply, sewage treatment and disposal, heating, electrical generation, fuel storage, kitchen and dining and other facilities.

The availability of suitable equipment in sufficient quantities at the appropriate time is another major concern. An estimated 3,600 pieces of major equipment will be needed, including 320 side-boom tractors, 250 bulldozers, 150 backhoes and 90 compressors, and will cost an estimated $140 million.

Mr. Meeres said contractors will have to cope with a wide range of terrain and soil variations, which range from Arctic coastal plains to rugged mountains to glacial river valleys to muskegs to gently rolling farmlands.

Churches Vote For Union

By J. C. GRAHAM
CP Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — After seven years of discussion and preparation, members of five Protestant churches in New Zealand have voted for union.

But the majorities in some denominations were not large, so that the future of the proposals still remain in doubt.

Since 1965, the Anglicans, Presbyterians, Methodists, Churches of Christ and Congregationalists have been discussing a plan for church union.

The original plan has been amended several times until a final proposal to put before individual denominations was agreed upon last year.

It amounts to a compromise containing elements of all five denominations, while allowing considerable individual freedom of opinion. The plan provides for deacons, presbyters and bishops (although with modified duties as compared with those of ministers in any of the five churches), and for division into parishes, dioceses, anda national assembly, the supreme council of the united church.

Much argument for and against the union plan has proceeded in each church since the final plan was approved, and the proposals have been discussed at length by the inidividual congregations.

PREDICT UNION

In the wake of the vote, each church governing body now is faced with the problem of deciding what further action to take.

Observers predict that the Methodists will certainly opt for union, and the Presbyterians probably. Much doubt hinges on the decision of the two smallest churches, Churches of Christ and Congregational, but their abstention would not necessarily wreck the plan.

The crucial decision probably lies with the Anglicans, the largest of the five churches involved. And Anglican spokesmen are widely divided on whether the majority in its vote of 58 per cent to 42 per cent is large enough to justify carrying through the plan for union.

Those opposed to union declare that the dissenters are too numerous to ignore. Those favoring union maintain that a large proportion of those voting against would nevertheless go along with a decision for unity if it was taken.

Methodists, Churches of Christ and Congregationalists are due to take final decisions this year, with verdicts either at annual conferences or in individual congregations.

SHAPE UNCERTAIN

The Presbyterian general assembly is due to take a decision shortly, but if the decision is for unity a second vote to determine the number adamantly opposed will be made in 1974.

Anglicans will make decisions by diocesan synods this year or next, followed by a final vote by the general synod in 1974.

So the shape of a new united church, if any, is not likely to become clear until 1975 when the new organization would come into being.

It seems as though the Presbyterians and Methodists will decide to go ahead with some project for union whatever the other churches decide—either by adopting the present plan in the hope that other churches will join later, or by amending it to create an organization more in keeping with their existing arrangements.

Whatever the national bodies decide, a movement for unity of individual congregations will continue. Presbyterians and Methodists are already involved in more than 40 union parishes and more are under consideration.

Several churches of the smaller denominations are also actively engaged in union negotiations.

Suspected Strangler Nabbed

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Waterloo police believe they have solved the mystery of the city's strangler.

Chief Harold Basse said Wednesday that four incidents last month in which teen-age boys were grabbed and choked may have been the work of a 15-year-old boy.

The boy, who is mentally disturbed, is serving a term in training school for another offence.

No assaults in the city have occurred since the suspect was sent to the school.

Desert Water Found

New York Times

SAN FRANCISCO — Government scientists recently drilled a deep hole in the Southern California desert and struck a big pocket of hot, brackish water. They were delighted.

They were delighted because the states of the Southwest are using more and more fresh water from the Colorado River than ever before. If the rate of consumption continues to rise, as expectd, the U.S. government will one day not be able to meet its treaty obligations with Mexico concerning how much water should remain flowing in the Colorado after American farms and cities have taken what they want from it.

The U.S., therefore, is looking for ways to augment the flow of the Colorado. Hot, brackish water may be the answer.

Estimates are that there is 1.1 billion acre-feet of such water beneath the Imperial Valley of Southern California. An acre-foot is the amount of water required to cover one acre to a depth of one foot.

This resource is referred to as a geothermal sea. It is simply a large underground deposit of saline water trapped in loose sediments, heated to high temperatures by the earth's core. Major geothermal deposits have been located in the U.S., Iceland, New Zealand, Italy, Japan, the Soviet Union and Mexico.

It is the hope of government scientists that this resource can be tapped. Geothermal fluids are regarded as being relatively easy to convert into fresh water by distillation processes since they emerge from the ground extremely hot. The heat, which is literally mined from the earth, should be sufficient to power the conversion. The recovered fresh water could then be pumped into the Colorado River to augment its flow.

The Office of Saline Water, an arm of the Bureau of Reclamation of the Department of the Interior, is investigating the promise of such a scheme. In mid-August it finished drilling a test hole to a depth of 8,030 feet on the East Mesa of the Imperial Valley, about seven miles southeast of Holtville, Calif.

The temperature at the bottom of the hole measures 392 degrees fahrenheit; the water is brackish and not quite so salty as sea water. The steamy water emerges from the ground at 245 degrees fahrenheit, a spokesman for the project said recently, which is hot enough to produce electricity and to desalt water.

If all goes well project scientists expect to be ready to build several demonstration desalting plants within the next 10 years. The plants would produce about 100,000 acre-feet of desalted water each year and 420 megawatts of electricity.

To keep the land from collapsing as they pump the hot, brackish water up, project scientists plan to inject millions of gallons of cool water back into the ground. They have a source already picked out. It is the Salton Sea, a large body of brackish water in the Imperial Valley, which was formed 67 years ago when a dam to divert the Colorado River broke and flooded the valley floor. Today, the Salton Sea has stabilized — it is not getting larger or smaller — and is well-fed by agricultural runoff.

By 1980, project officials say, they hope to begin large-scale production, farming 2.5 million acre-feet of fresh water from the grounds annually.

Alberni Fallers End Walkout

PORT ALBERNI — Fifty fallers at MacMillan Bloedel's Franklin River division returned to work Wednesday morning after a one-day walkout protesting the dismissal of faller Otto McDonald.

A spokesman for the Port Alberni local of the International Woodworkers of America said the union will file a grievance over the dismissal and it was on the basis that action was being taken that the fallers went back to work.

McDonald, 59, was fired when he refused for the second day in succession to ride in the same crummy as several fallers who worked during the fallers' work stoppage last summer.

Vietnam Peace Pact Bared

Times News Services

The Vietnam war is all but over.

The White House announced today that an agreement would be signed "within a matter of weeks" ending the war and bringing home U.S. troops and prisoners of war.

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger made the announcement in Washington at a specially called news conference. The U.S. move appeared to have been forced on the White House by Hanoi's announcement of terms of the agreement earlier today.

Kissinger said the nine points of the agreement as announced on Radio Hanoi are essentially correct. (See separate story).

Hanoi said the United States had agreed to sign a peace pact next Tuesday, a week before the presidential election, but then backed off and asked for further negotiations, saying it was having difficulty getting Saigon to go along.

North Vietnam accused the U.S. of bad faith in putting off implementation of the agreement three times on the grounds that it was having difficulty in obtaining the agreement of the South Vietnamese government of President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Kissinger, however, said in his news conference he is convinced Thieu will accept the terms of the cease-fire.

"A separate agreement between North Vietnam and the United States does not concern us in any way. We in South Vietnam have the right of self-determination."

However, the Saigon broadcast did not say whether Thieu would oppose a Hanoi-Washington settlement of the war.

Unofficial sources in the presidential palace said earlier that Thieu would not be averse to a Hanoi-Washington agreement as long as the United States continued its Vietnamization and other military and economic commitments to South Vietnam.

In a broadcast Tuesday, Thieu conceded a ceasefire could come soon but said he never would agree to a coalition government with the Viet Cong.

The Hanoi proposal would have Saigon and the Viet Cong negotiate for an election of a coalition government.

Kissinger claimed one of the problems which still needed to be settled before an agreement was signed was whether Washington should sign the agreement on behalf of South Vietnam.

He said this was not a serious difficulty, but it is understandable that the South Vietnamese, who have suffered the most during the war and who must remain under the settlement, "should want to sign their own peace treaty.

Kissinger said a final agreement could be reached after one more meeting of three or four days with Hanoi's negotiators, and would result in a cease-fire to be followed within 60 days by the withdrawal of U.S. troops and the release of all American prisoners.

He said the timing of the agreement was not motivated by the presidential election. The administration had "no intention" of disclosing it and would not have if Hanoi had not broken the news.

At the Paris peace talks, the U.S. officially protested Hanoi's disclosure of the agreement. Ambassador William Porter called it a "most unfortunate violation of our understanding," but Hanoi de-

Peace Terms

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Following are the main points of an agreement to end the Vietnam War which North Vietnam said today had been worked out between the United States and North Vietnam at secret negotiations:

1. The United States respects the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Vietnam as recognized by the 1954 Geneva agreements.

2. Twenty-four hours after the signing of the agreement, a ceasefire shall be observed throughout South Vietnam. The United States will stop all its military activities and end the bombing and mining in North Vietnam. Within 60 days, there will be a total withdrawal from South Vietnam of troops and military personnel of the United States and those of foreign countries allied with the United States and with the Republic of Vietnam.

The two South Vietnamese parties shall not accept the introduction of troops, military advisers, and military personnel, armaments, munitions and war material into South Vietnam. The two South Vietnamese parties shall be permitted to make periodical replacements of armaments, munitions, and war materials that have been worn out or damaged after the ceasefire, on the basis of piece for piece of similar characteristics and properties. The United States will not continue its military involvement or intervene in the internal affairs of South Vietnam.

WILL RELEASE PoWs

3. The return of all captured and detained persons belonging to the parties will take place in parallel with the withdrawal of American troops.

4. The principles for the exercise of the South Vietnamese peoples right to self-determination are as follows: The South Vietnamese people shall decide themselves the political future of South Vietnam through genuinely free and democratic general elections under international supervision.

The United States is not committed to any political tendency or to any personality in South Vietnam, and it does not seek to impose a pro-American regime in Saigon.

National reconciliation and concord will be achieved, the democratic liberties of the people ensured. An administrative structure called the National Council of National Reconciliation and Concord of three equal segments will be set up to promote the implementation of the signed agreements by the provisional revolutionary government of the Republic of South Vietnam (Viet Cong) and the government of the Republic of Vietnam (Saigon) and to

Hammon, 32, Eugene, Ore., insisted that the brown material was clover, which he said he smoked because tobacco was bad for his health and pot was illegal.

Police lab technicians confirmed Wednesday that the plastic bags held clover. Hammon was freed.

Canada Faces Rough Times —2 Experts

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Canada's chief statistician and an economist today predicted rough times ahead for Canada on unemployment and an economic downturn.

Sylvia Ostry said her projection is for 2.6 million more workers in the labor force by 1980 than there were in 1970—a growth of about 30 per cent in the decade or 2.4 per cent a year.

This compares with an expected increase of 1.4 per cent a year in the United States, and less than one half of one per cent yearly in Sweden and Japan.

And economist Carl Beigie said that figures available next month will show "a very sharp downturn" in the rate of real economic growth."

"Listening to some of the commentaries that have been made in the past month or so, one gets the impression that this year ended with the second quarter, from which point 1973 will carry forward in an onward and upward march to full recovery.

Beigie, executive director of the Private Planning Association of Canada, said: "Virtually every recent indicator — retail sales, merchandise trade, new orders for manufactured goods, manufacturing inventories, industrial production, unemployment — suggests a very sharp downturn in the rate of growth of real economic activity between the second and third quarters."

Miss Ostry, chief statistician for Statistics Canada, cautioned the annual business outlook seminar of the Conference Board of Canada that her predictions were based on many assumptions and projections.

The conference board is a business-oriented research organization. The annual conference brings together top experts from business, government, universities and other organizations for a wide-ranging view of the future.

"The numbers are pretty impressive," Miss Ostry said.

"Obviously, the challenge to decision makers caused by the need to generate something close to 2.5 million new jobs in 10 years will be substantial."

She saw the 25-34 age group, now making up about 22 per cent of the labor force, accounting for more than 40 per cent of the growth during the decade, to reach 28 per cent of the total.

Prison Guards Book Off 'Sick'

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Most of the guards at the nearby Millhaven maximum security penitentiary began booking off sick today in what they described as a protest over the refusal of senior penitentiary officials to listen to their grievances.

A spokesman said the action will utlimately leave only about 10 to 15 guards on duty during a shift. There are 365 convicts at the prison 13 miles west of here.

He predicted the normal 35-man day shift will be cut to less than half with the four watchtowers being manned as well as six control centres within the prison.

A spokesman, who wished to remain unidentified, said only enough manpower will be reporting for work to feed the convicts and keep the institution secure.

The guards' action came after Millhaven authorities met demands of the prisoners Wednesday to allow them free movement within their living units from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. each day after the privilege was cancelled earlier in the week, the guard said.

He said an estimated 80 per cent of the convict population refused to work and staged a sit-down strike before meeting with officials from the senior administrative staff.

Last week Douglas Alkenbrack, Progressive Conservative candidate for Frontenac-Lennox and Addington, produced a report that said the warden's authority at Millhaven had been usurped by incompetent officials who out-ranked him.

It also predicted further trouble among the convicts, many of whom took part in the Kingston penitentiary riot of 1971 which left two dead and caused more than $1 million damage.

Surprise Arms In Grit Arsenal

Times News Services

While opposition spokesmen spent the fifth-last day of the federal election campaign attacking the government economic record, the Liberal party threw two surprises into the political battle Wednesday.

The first was the experimental use of U.S.-style direct mail, in the form of a letter from Prime Minister Trudeau to individual voters.

The second was Mrs. Trudeau, who accompanied him to an Edmundston, N.B., rally Wednesday night and was to join him in campaigning today in Fredericton and several Ontario centres.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, speaking in a church hall near Toronto, said a Conservative government could cut unemployment in half.

His method would consist of "liberating the spirit of enterprise which we believe now is the prisoner of a policy that is putting a death tax on personal initiative."

MORE THAN ONE WAY

In London, Ont., New Democrat Leader David Lewis told a student audience there are other ways than nationalization to make industry operate for the public good.

The fourth party leader, Real Caouette of Social Credit, drew 1,000 enthusiastic persons to a rally in Drummondville, Que., where Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin is running for re-election. Caouette appealed to youth to work within the political system by helping parties like Social Credit.

Although Trudeau spent less time Wednesday campaigning than the other three leaders, he travelled the farthest of all — from Vancouver, where he spent most of the day resting, to Edmundston.

His chartered DC-9 jet made a brief stop in Ottawa to pick up Mrs. Trudeau, who

MORE CANDIDATES THAN AUDIENCE

HALIFAX (CP) — Candidates outnumbered the audience at a meet-your-candidate session here Wednesday night.

Four Halifax area candidates in Monday's federal election turned up for the public meeting along with two reporters, a campaign manager, the meeting organizer and the wife of one of the contenders.

The general audience numbered three.

Students Stumped

VANCOUVER (CP) — A survey conducted Wednesday by television station CHAN among 30 University of British Columbia students revealed that less than half the students could name Canada's four major political parties and their leaders.

The television station undertook the survey following comments by Humphrey Mostyn, the returning officer in Vancouver Centre that too few people know what is going on inn the current election campaign.

Of the 30 UBS students questioned, 18 knew the name of their, home riding and half knew the name of the candidate who has represented the riding in the last house. Fourteen could name the political parties and their leaders.

Al the students were of voting age.

Coup in Dahomey

COTONOU, Dahomey (AP) — The army seized power in a coup today in this West African country, toppling the government headed by Justin Ahomadegbe.

FALLING POUND SHAKES FRANC

LONDON (AP) — The British pound fell to a record low for the third straight day today, unsettling world money markets and affecting other leading currencies including the French franc.

By early afternoon the pound was down to $2.3463 (U.S.) here, a drop of nearly 1½ cents from the close of $2.36 Wednesday night and an all-time low.

London dealers said the Paris foreign exchange market was "panicky." The French franc weakened against the U.S. dollar in moves related to the pound's troubles.

The pound has been falling because in the view of financial markets it was over-valued, due primarily to Britain's rate of inflation, the highest in Western Europe, and other economic troubles.

Once the pound had sharply declined, however, lowering its exchange rates against other currencies, it left the weaker ones among them exposed as the next targets for reduced exchange rates, the French franc prominent among them.

Dealers in London said the key element was government efforts to control inflation. Business, trade union and government leaders met today in an attempt to work out a voluntary price and wage restraint program for controlling inflation, now running at some 10 per cent a year.

Subsidies for Private Hospitals

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government announced Wednesday that it plans to subsidize private hospitals which show need to help them withstand the effects of the provincial minimumwage hike on their operating costs.

Premier Barrett and Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi indicated hospitals which apply for government help will receive it on an individually-negotiated basis. Levi said some have already indicated such need.

Conservative house leader Scott Wallace said he had received a letter from Glengarry Private Hospital of Victoria informing him that the daily rate per patient would be going up to $16 from $14 as a result of the minimum wage hike.

Barrett answered by saying that the government does not indend to allow the wage hike to make any private hospital patients suffer.

Outside the house, Levi said that cases of hospitals requiring assistance will be dealt with on an individual basis.

He said "there is no way we will blanket everybody in on this" and added that hospitals will have to show that they are "specific cases of hardship."

The rate paid by the rehabilitation department to private hospitals which take in welfare cases varies between $280 and $310 per month per patient.

Levi said in some cases the hospitals are heavily dependent on the welfare cases sent to them by the province, indicating that the operators are not in a position to pay the increase in the minimum wage level.

Barrett said during the debate that it is not the policy of the government to favor profit-making in the health field and indicated that his government considers it an "urgent priority" to provide non-profit chronic care services under the framework of the B.C. hospital insurance plan.

Barrett said it has been a promise of the Social Credit party since 1956 to remove the profit-making aspect from the health field and charged that the Socreds never did anything about it when they were government.

"We are now the government and we intend to move on this," Barrett said. "We want the operators of private hospitals to understand that we don't believe they should be operating at a profit. We mean it and we intend to act on it."

The premier said the government would move "with as much dispatch and openness as we can."

He said it has been difficult for the government to determine the effect of the minimum wage hike on the various sectors of the community because there was no research ever done on the subject by the previous administration.

The subsidies going to the private hospitals from the welfare department, he said, would hopefully be on an interim basis until the province can set up the non-profit

China Builds Bomb Shelter Tunnel Cities

PEKING (Reuter) — The Chinese have almost completed the construction of a vast system of underground bomb shelters beneath their cities which officials said Wednesday would give protection to urban populations in the event of a surprise nuclear or conventional attack.

All schools, factories, restaurants, theatres, new apartment blocks, government departments and most stores have their own shelter entrances and trained staff who know their location and operation.

These entrances lead down into well-lighted and ventilated tunnels and shelters 26 feet beneath the streets of Peking and China's other cities.

The offiials took two Reuter reporters into a clothing store and down a hidden staircase under a sliding section of the floor into part of a vast subterranean city beneath the streets of their ancient capital.

In all their conversations in the tunnels, as piped-in revolutionary music echoed in the background, the Chinese officials stressed the defensive nature of the shelter system.

The officials said Peking's shelters have hospitals, dormitories, stores and canteens, a telephone and broadcast system, running water and sanitary facilities.

The officials said the underground shelter system supersedes an earlier series of shelters 13 feet beneath the surface of Peking begun in December, 1969.

The cover for the old low, the tunnels too narrow and equipment inadequate, the officials said.

The Peking shelters provide shelter system was too shal- large measure of protection conventional bombs and a complete protection against against nuclear attack. Work is continuing to perfect the system against nuclear devices.

The officials did not mention the Soviet Union by name as a possible foe but referred to "a million troops stationed along the border."

SMOKES ROLL OFF MACHINE

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Bill and Charlotte Luly say they have found a solution to the high cost of smoking. They built their own cigarette machine which pumps out six cigarettes an hour at a cost of 15 cents a pack.

As the two watch television in the evenings their contraption of 15 motors, 50 switches, 12 bicycle chain link belts and four fan belts, sends the cigarettes bouncing along the assembly line.

It was 18 months ago that the Lulys, discovering their cigarette habit was costing them $10 a week, decided it was too expensive.

Luly said he made the 9½-foot-long motor-driven machine by "just working around the garage, like a lot of other men do in their spare time."

"It's done surprising things when we're not looking," Luly said. "It even rejects badly packaged cigarettes and shuts off automatically if three come out bad."

Mrs. Luly says the machine took 12 months to build and "a lot of beer and a lot of profanity."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge William Ostler explained the gravity of criminal court proceedings for the benefit of "fellow pupils" who appeared Wednesday to watch two 17-year-olds receive sentences for breaking and entering and theft.

Bradley G. Propp, 2781 Penelope, and David S. Thomson, 2783 Penelope, pleaded guilty Oct. 11 to breaking into the Royal Colwood Golf Course and stealing five golf clubs valued at $28 each. The clubs were later pawned for $10.

A pre-sentence report, prepared by a probation officer, noted the youths' involvement with drugs and Ostler said there are many people the same age who are heavily involved with illegal drugs.

"Probably few average citizens realize that, in this community and in many Canadian communities, there are 17-year-olds who are regular drug-users," said Ostler.

After imposing a suspended sentence and two-year probationary term for each youth, Ostler made his "additional comments" on court proceedings and probationary terms.

"There is an idea in some quarters that probation is a simple matter and that by getting probation you're getting away with it. Probation is not simple at all," he said.

"I emphasize that for the special benefit of that claque of a dozen or so pupils, apparently from your school, who appeared with you on the last occasion (Oct. 11)," he said.

"As you well know, at the conclusion of the proceedings, they waited only until they got into the lobby of this courtroom and they behaved disgracefully, with derisive laughter and shouting.

"The court is always very pleased to have young persons, whether school pupils or not, attend sessions of the court, as it is instructional, and young people should see how the courts of this country operate.

"But these courts and these proceedings are not a circus, and this sort of behavior from young people is poor citizenship and it's contempt of court and it will not be permitted again.

"If there had been any police officers out in the lobby on that last occasion steps would have been taken at that time to take the names of those pupils," he said.

"This is not a laughing matter. It's extremely serious and if there's any disobedience of any of the terms of probation you will find that out and that will be a good example to those of your fellow pupils who think the whole thing is so funny," he said.

Wade Withdraws Pollen Slander Suit

City architect John Wade has withdrawn his slander suit against Mayor Peter Pollen following an apology made public by Pollen Wednesday.

Wade launched the suit against Pollen about five months ago after Pollen had called on Wade May 8 to resign from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission. Pollen called for the resignation because of conflict of interest and Wade's "political declarations" against the city's anti-highrise zoning policies.

Pollen had also charged that Wade's "professional and biased counsel" on the commission had contributed to the city's poor planning.

"I feel it my duty to express in the clearest possible terms my sincere apology to Mr. John Wade for the remarks I made recently concerning him in his role as an architect, a member of the National Capital Commission, and the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission.

In doing so, I fully recognize that Mr. Wade, a long-time resident of Victoria, a community worker, a distinguished and active member of his profession, past chairman of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission, has made many contributions to our community, both in his profession and as a member of many social and cultural organizations.

"In fact, his part as one of the team of architects in the City Hall restoration and his long service on the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission are examples of this contribution.

"I will continue to hold him in high regard. We have been friends in the past and, by reason of the mutual respect we have for each other, it is fitting that his unfortunate matter is at an end."

Lawyer Ian Stewart, acting for Wade, said that libel suits against the Victoria Times and the Daily Colonist would also be withdrawn.

Schools To Honor War Dead

Public schools throughout British Columbia will close on Monday, Nov. 13, in observance of Remembrance Day, Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced today.

Mrs. Dailly said she hopes schools throughout the province will hold special assemblies on the Friday before the holiday, so that students will be able to suitably honor those who have fought for their country.

"Emphasis should be placed at this time upon the need for bringing about a future which is highlighted by peace and honor for all the people of the world," she said.

Gov't Taking Offices In Belmont Building

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government has signed a lease to move some of its offices into the Belmont Building on Government Street, Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said today.

Hartley said the government will be taking over seven floors of the building, which is being remodelled inside. He said "major portions" of the departments of rehabilitation and health will be moved into the building.

The move will come, he said, later this year or early in 1973. He would not disclose the length of the lease but said "it would not be worthwhile for the government to lease for less than three years."

The government will look at its lease arrangement "year by year," Hartley said.

Premier Barrett has expressed the desire to get as many of his cabinet ministers as possible into the main Legislative Building, Hartley said. But that factor was not the only consideration made for the move.

'CRIMINAL'

He said the move will provide the needed room for administrative workers in the departments of health and rehabilitation and is not just designed to bring cabinet ministers into the main building.

Hartley maintains his office in the Douglas Building across the street from the main Legislative Building. Several other cabinet ministers also have their offices there.

Hartley made no mention of the cost of the lease.

51-YEAR LEASE

Renovation is being done by Stevenson Construction Ltd. for Fort Victoria Properties Ltd., which was granted a 51-year lease on the building by the federal department of public works.

Sam Bawlf, of Fort Victoria Properties, said the two lower floors will remain commercial, one housing a restaurant, and there would also be provision for entertainment facilities.

Victoria Selected As Institute Site

No date has been set for construction of a multi-million dollar oceanographic institute in the Greater Victoria area, which was announced Wednesday by Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm.

"The project is expected to employ over a five-year period up to 1,000 people," Lindholm said at a press conference. "It would be one of the major employers in the area."

Site of the oceanographic institute has been up in the air since the federal government announced the planned institute in 1969.

Victoria was originally favored for the project, but later studies, including a 1970 report for the Science Council of Canada, recommended Vancouver because of resources at the University of British Columbia.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Terry Farmer said today he was delighted with the decision to locate the institute here.

"The only thing that we're concerned about now is to press for a date," he said.

"We wouldn't like it to become a political issue but we would like to find out when the government is planning to do this," said Farmer.

Most likely site for the oceanographic institute complex is the Colwood area, said Lindholm, with Patricia Bay and HMC Dockyard at Esquimalt also possibilities. He estimated the federal government will spend $5 to $7 million building the complex.

Mayor Peter Pollen said today that if the institute is established locally it will be a "great potential boon" to the entire region, regardless of its actual location.

The institute would require support facilities in the form of research establishments, and services to those establishments, while it could also lead to the development of specialized faculties at the University of Victoria, he said.

However, Pollen deplored the "sickening" timing of the announcement, adding: "I personally don't believe the country should be run by this type of blatant pork-barrelling."

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford were unavailable for comment.

"It's a pure election gimmick," Esquimalt-Saanich Conservative candidate Donald Munro said. "The timing leaves it open to question."

Environment Minister Davis has given the institute to Victoria "just for the election, of course" because the Liberals feel their candidates here need some assistance, said Munro.

"I wasn't just sure where the plum was going to be dropped and here it is," he said.

"Estevan, here we come," he added, referring to a Liberal promise in the 1968 election to build a $6 million ship on the west coast to replace the retired coast guard ship Estevan. The ship was never replaced.

Munro said he would be delighted if the oceanographic institute stays in Greater Victoria, "and it will if there's a Stanfield government."

Besides the 1,000 persons — oceanographers and technicians — directly employed by the institute, Lindholm expects the complex will create job spinoffs in other areas.

"I think it opens up tremendous horizons" for Dockyard for the Defence Research Establishment Pacific, for the Victoria Machinery Depot, a primary submersible producer, and for Yarrows Shipyard Ltd., he said.

Business 'Apathetic' To Jaycee Toy Drive

Disenchanted with the lack of response by businessmen for toys or donations for their Santa Ship, the Junior Chamber of Commerce will ask the public for help this year.

Vice-president Glyn Williams said the Jaycees found increasing apathy among businessmen during the past four years when asked for help.

"We need 1,500 toys for underprivileged children who live in isolated spots in the Gulf and San Juan Islands," he said.

"We've been canvassing since Sept. 1 and all we have so far is 50 toys, and six weeks to go."

Williams explained:

"The Bay has agreed to place a big Christmas tree on the second floor of the store. The idea is that people who have toys to donate will be able to leave them there, beginning Nov. 7. Even used toys will be fine, providing they are workable."

Williams said the Jaycees will wrap all the toys.

The Bay will also donate $200 in a novel way toward the Santa Ship.

"We will be asking children to write letters, saying what they would like to give," said Williams, "and these will be put in a big bag under the tree. Each day a letter will be drawn and the store will donate whatever toy the letter suggests."

A ceiling of $5 has been set for each toy.

Another big problem facing the Jaycees is to get between 1,500 and 2,000 pounds of candy and fruit, to be given out along with the toys. Williams hopes people with left-over Halloween candy will donate it. The Jaycees' office is at 207 Government.

This will be the 10th year the Jaycees have had their Santa Ship. As in 1971, HMCS Porte de la Reine, with Lt.-Cmdr. Al Horner in command, will be used.

Williams said two stops — one at Vesuvius Bay on Salt Spring Island and the other at Maple Bay — have been dropped because his group felt they were not accomplishing their purpose of helping the underprivileged children at either place.

"There was this Indian lady who still believed in Santa. She had written a letter, saying that she had wanted a doll all her life. Somehow, all the kids in the school had heard about her letter.

"You should have seen her face when she got the doll — and the kids' too. It was just wonderful."

This year, the Porte de la Reine will leave Esquimalt Friday, Dec. 15 at 6:30 p.m. and tie up in the Inner Harbor that evening about 8 p.m. As usual, she will be bright with lights and decorations and emanating carols during the evening hours.

WILLIAMS
. . . asking public help

Before entering the Inner Harbor, she will make a sail-past off the Victoria coastline.

Aboard her, if the navy approves, a child chosen from among the 40 whose letters to The Bay have been drawn, will be a guest of honor.

Leaving the Inner Harbor at 6 a.m. Dec. 16, the ship will make stops at Bedwell Harbor on Pender Island, Roche Harbor on San Juan Island and Waldon Island that day. She will stop at Deer Harbor on Orcas Island, to rendezvous there with the Bellingham Jaycees' Santa Ship.

Final stop that day will be at Friday Harbor on San Juan.

The Sunday stops will be at Kuper Island, Predy Harbor on Thetis Island and Shell Beach near Ladysmith.

INMATE RECAPTURED IN SASKATCHEWAN

A William Head minimum-security institution inmate who failed to return Oct. 22, was arrested Wednesday by Foam Lake RCMP near Yorkton, Saskatchewan, Colwood RCMP said today.

When he failed to return Sunday, Yorkton RCMP were notified because Kowalchuk's next-of-kin live in that area, police said.

Charges pending in Victoria will probably be waived to Saskatchewan, RCMP said.

Report Revives Street Extension

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A years-old controversial proposal to extend Michigan Street through a corner of Beacon Hill Park, one partial answer to downtown traffic congestion, is revived in a report soon to be released by city hall.

City council has not officially discussed the study, which is called the Southern Fringe Bypass Report, and neither aldermen nor officials will comment on its contents.

However, the Times has learned that the Michigan extension is mentioned in the report, not as a firm recommendation, but as one of several alternatives which council could adopt to meet the ever-increasing problem of inadequate streets handling too much traffic.

The idea, first mooted strongly in the 1967 James Bay Land Use and Transportation Plan, envisages extending Michigan to the east to connect with Heywood in the vicinity of Rupert Street — by carving through a rocky, attractive section of the park.

City hall sources indicate, however, that the extension as now outlined would not substantially reduce the actual park area as it would be coupled with closure of the Superior Street "loop" to the north. This would mean, in effect, a land swap.

A. A spokesman for B.C. Ferries personnel department says there are waitresses on the ferries. Waitresses, he said, work in coffee shops, while waiters work in cafeterias and restaurants on the vessels. The reason for this system, he said, "was just a matter of division of duties."

Rare Marmots Threatened By Logging

Today one of the animal's few remaining colonies is in danger of being wiped out by logging operations near Nanaimo, says biologist David Charles Kerridge of Malaspina College.

Kerridge said hunters and naturalists have asked Crown Zellerbach and MacMillan Bloedel, which have the timber rights on the land, to save the animal's habitat.

The island marmot is a distinct species, differing from other varieties found in other parts of Canada and commonly called woodchucks. He doesn't live in woods but in burrows in alpine regions.

The animal is slightly larger than a fully grown tomcat. It sports a dark chocolate brown pellage, seldom whistles like a woodchuck and hibernates usually from September to spring.

Little is known about the marmot except that it is rare and only common to the island. There are only a few other known colonies.

Kerridge and members of the Nanaimo Fish and Game Club, who are acting as guardians for the colony, are keeping the exact location of the animal's habitat a secret because they don't want them disturbed by people.

There are about 10 animals in the colony.

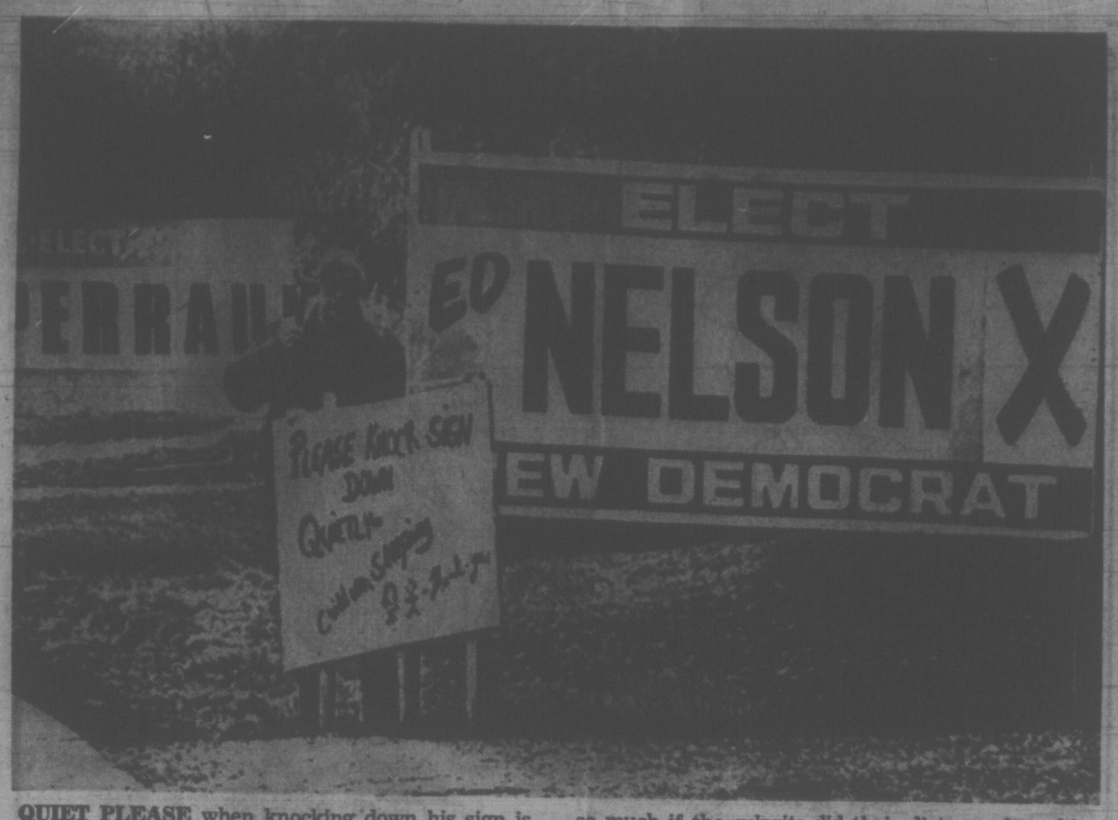
Kerridge said a logging road is being pushed to some trees standing on the edge of the alpine meadow where the animals live. The trees act as a buffer and protects the burrows from cold winds.

Their removal, he believes, would result in the extinction of the colony.

"According to the forestry firm the timber is not merchantable," he said. "It is largely scrub."

Kerridge hopes the logging companies will co-operate as they have nothing to gain by cutting the trees.

"It will be a pity if this species' become extinct," he said. "It is now on the endangered list — a warning to us that we will lose another animal unless we take steps to protect the species."



QUIET PLEASE when knocking down his sign is the message John Elgin Keays of Burnaby is trying to convey to vandals. He said he wouldn't mind so much if the culprits did their dirty work on his front lawn without awakening sleeping children.

CYPRUS BOWL PLAN SLASHED

The Cypress Bowl ski development in West Vancouver will be reduced in scale under the NDP government, Lands Minister Bob Williams said Wednesday.

Williams told reporters that the previous government had planned to spend heavily in the area to "hide a scandalous logging operation" carried out previously.

The socred plan included huge parking lots, heavy equipment and large capital spending which the NDP government is throwing out in favor of a job-intensive scheme of smaller scale.

Williams said the government has no intention of spending taxpayers money on facilities designed mainly for the expert skier.

Dear Alex, He Says And Then Moves On

An NDP-appointed executive assistant who enjoyed only a short stay in the attorney-General's department said today the B.C. civil service has little awareness of social problems and future needs of the province.

Dr. Raymond Rodgers, 37, who became Attorney-General Alex Macdonald's executive assistant shortly after the NDP government took power, mailed copies of his letter of resignation to the legislative press gallery with a note attached commenting on the B.C. civil service.

The resignation letter says the executive assistant post was only planned as a temporary appointment.

Here is the text of Rodgers' release, which was typed on attorney-General's department memorandum paper and post-marked from Vancouver on Wednesday.

"Dear Alex: As you know we both agreed that I would come in and help you out on a temporary basis — given your immediate needs at the time of your appointment to two portfolios.

"I think the time has now come for me to move on to whatever other job the government or party may see fit to use me in. It has been a great pleasure working with you. All the best, Raymond."

Attached was a sheet marked for the press room notice board which reads as follows:

"I take strong exception to Pat Jordan's attacks on those persons appointed by the NDP government.

"She would have the public believe that for 20 years the Socreds hired on an objective basis. In fact, for 20 years every attempt was made to keep progressive thinking persons out of the public service.

"The result has been a public service with very little awareness of many social problems, and of problems of the future — such as the impact of computers and cablevision on our culture and economy.

Ships' Officers Strike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Masters, Mates and Pilots Union went on strike against the Pacific Maritime Association Wednesday in an action that could shut down all U.S. Pacific Coast ports where PMA vessels are moored.

Six pickets from the union were posted at Pier 96 here shortly after a Pacific Far East Lines' barge-carrying freighter, the Japan Bear, arrived. It was the only PMA ship in port here. Officials said there were about 75 PMA ships operating on the West Coast.

A spokesman for the striking union said negotiations broke down on a new contract over the union's demand for rotating jobs among second and third mates. Other issues include wages, hours and working conditions.

In Seattle the union set up picket lines at Seattle docks at 7 a.m. All U.S. ships belonging to the PMA, except those carrying military cargo, are being picketed, said Capt. Rupert Soriano, Seattle agent for Local 6.

In Anchorage, a spokesman for Sea Land Services said the strike could "tie up 90 per cent of the shipping into Alaska."

Terminal manager for Sea Land, Ed Duncza, said the effects would probably not be felt in Alaska for several weeks because Sea Land "had two vessels in over the weekend from Seattle" and another is due Wednesday.

Duncza said most of the big chain stores should have an inventory that will last them for a "couple of weeks," but added that the supplies of produce and fresh meats were not that good. He said on dry commodities there would probably be no problem.

Candidate Sees Swing to NDP

A massive swing to the New Democratic Party from disenchanted Liberals was predicted by Victoria NDP candidate Flemming Hansen Wednesday at an open-house meeting.

"It has become obvious that thousands of progressive-minded people who supported Trudeau in 1968 are totally disgusted with the prime minister's complacent attitude in the face of Canada's serious problems," Hansen said.

"Due to the Tories' weakness there is little hope of replacing the Liberals with a majority government," Hansen stated.

"But there is a definite possibility the New Democrats will form the official opposition, starting a new era in federal politics."

Allan McKinnon, Conservative candidate in Victoria, has asked for the support of the Victoria Labor Council in his opposition to federal immigration policies.

In a letter sent Wednesday to council secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan, McKinnon said that lax immigration policies are "literally stealing jobs away from the Canadian people."

McKinnon said people entering Canada as visitors should not be able to apply for status as a landed immigrant or permanent resident without returning to their homeland and applying from there.

"In times of high unemployment jobs that could be going to Canadians are going to immigrants who have circumvented the proper channels and arrived in Canada via the back door," he said.

A Conservative government will mean an extra $250 in the pocket of anyone earning $5,000 in 1973, Esquimalt-Saanich Conservative candidate Donald Munro said at a campaign meeting Wednesday.

"Mr Stanfield has committed himself to a 4 per cent reduction in personal income tax, retroactive to July of this year," said Munro.

"He has also said the Trudeau government's 3 per cent increase, to go into effect at the first of 1973, will not be implemented by a Conservative administration."

CAR TEST CONTRACT

A motor vehicle inspection station will be built by the provincial government in Nanaimo, it was announced Wednesday.

The $539,800 contract is going to D. Robinson Construction Ltd. of Nanaimo. Public Works Minister Bill Hartley and Attorney-General Alex Macdonald made the announcement jointly.

Mayor Won't Sign Until Writ Served

The bylaw designating 300 acres of North Saanich a development area for the Kingswood golf course and housing proposal will remain unsigned at least until the weekend.

Mayor Trevor Davis was away last week when Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton issued the writ of mandamus compelling the mayor to sign the bylaw passed by council in June.

The mayor is reported to be awaiting formal serving of the writ.

Ald. Paul Grieve said the possibility of appealing the judment has been discussed.

Meanwhile, Philip Holmes of Pemberton Holmes Ltd., agents for the landowner, W. G. Ellis, said he expects negotiations on a land-use contract to be drawn out.

BUILD GOLF COURSE

It will take about a year to draw up a contract and another year before a nine-hole golf course, first phase of the development, can be readied for use, predicts Holmes.

Both Holmes and colleague Douglas Gage have expressed disappointment with the reception given the Kingswood proposal. The scheme has faced many delays since introduction to council in November 1969 and approval in principle one year ago.

"We have hoped that this will set minimum standards for development of the whole municipality," said Homes, who also emphasied that signing the bylaw does not commit the municipality in any way.

A letter dated June 14, 1972, gives assurance that no action will be taken in the event that a land use contract cannot be agreed upon.

Study Hall For Indians

High school students from four Indian reserves on the Saanich Peninsula are being provided with a "study hall" program on week nights in Tsartlip School, Brentwood.

Transportation to the school, where tutors and reference materials are available, has been arranged by the Indian school board.

Molly Pelkey, school and home co-ordinator, says there are 75 students from East and West Saanich, Pat Bay and Cole Bay reserves who can take advantage of the program.

Most of the students achieve much more by studying in classroom environment, she said.

"They find this program really works."

A private organization donated money to operate the buses and pay supervisors after the Indian school board had appealed unsuccessfully to the department of Indian affairs, the First Citizens' Fund and the Indian Art and Welfare Society.

The program is now funded until Christmas, but Mrs. Pelkey says money and additional tutors will be needed to continue the study hall until May.

PEACE FOR VIETNAM

Peace Terms

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Following are the main points of an agreement to end the Vietnam War which North Vietnam said today had been worked out between the United States and North Vietnam at secret negotiations:

1. The United States respects the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Vietnam as recognized by the 1954 Geneva agreements.

2. Twenty-four hours after the signing of the agreement, a ceasefire shall be observed throughout South Vietnam. The United States will stop all its military activities and end the bombing and mining in North Vietnam. Within 60 days, there will be a total withdrawal from South Vietnam of troops and military personnel of the United States and those of foreign countries allied with the United States and with the Republic of Vietnam.

The two South Vietnamese parties shall not accept the introduction of troops, military advisers, and military personnel, armaments, munitions and war material into South Vietnam. The two South Vietnamese parties shall be permitted to make periodical replacements of armaments, munitions, and war materials that have been worn out or damaged after the ceasefire, on the basis of piece for piece of similar characteristics and properties. The United States will not continue its military involvement or intervene in the internal affairs of South Vietnam.

WILL RELEASE PoWs

3. The return of all captured and detained persons belonging to the parties will take place in parallel with the withdrawal of American troops.

4. The principles for the exercise of the South Vietnamese peoples right to self-determination are as follows: The South Vietnamese people shall decide themselves the political future of South Vietnam through genuinely free and democratic general elections under international supervision.

The United States is not committed to any political tendency or to any personality in South Vietnam, and it does not seek to impose a pro-American regime in Saigon.

National reconciliation and concord will be achieved, the democratic liberties of the people ensured. An administrative structure called the National Council of National Reconciliation and Concord of three equal segments will be set up to promote the implementation of the signed agreements by the provisional revolutionary government of the Republic of South Vietnam (Viet Cong) and the government of the Republic of Vietnam (Saigon) and to

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Most of the guards at the nearby Millhaven maximum security penitentiary began booking off sick today in what they described as a protest over the refusal of senior penitentiary officials to listen to their grievances.

A spokesman said the action will ultimately leave only about 10 to 15 guards on duty during a shift. There are 365 convicts at the prison 13 miles west of here.

He predicted the normal 35-man day shift will be cut to less than half with the four watchtowers being manned as well as six control centres within the prison.

A spokesman, who wished to remain unidentified, said only enough manpower will be reporting for work to feed the convicts and keep the institution secure.

The guards' action came after Millhaven authorities met demands of the prisoners Wednesday to allow them free movement within their living units from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. each day after the privilege was cancelled earlier in the week, the guard said.

He said an estimated 80 per cent of the convict population refused to work and staged a sit-down strike before meeting with officials from the senior administrative staff.

Last week Douglas Alkenbrack, Progressive Conservative candidate for Frontenac-Lennox and Addington, produced a report that said the warden's authority at Millhaven had been usurped by incompetent officials who out-ranked him.

It also predicted further trouble among the convicts, many of whom took part in the Kingston penitentiary riot of 1971 which left two dead and caused more than $1 million damage.

Surprise Arms In Grit Arsenal

Times News Services

While opposition spokesmen spent the fifth-last day of the federal election campaign attacking the government economic record, the Liberal party threw two surprises into the political battle Wednesday.

The first was the experimental use of U.S.-style direct mail, in the form of a letter from Prime Minister Trudeau to individual voters.

The second was Mrs. Trudeau, who accompanied him to an Edmundston, N.B., rally Wednesday night and was to join him in campaigning today in Fredericton and several Ontario centres.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, speaking in a church hall near Toronto, said a Conservative government could cut unemployment in half.

His method would consist of "liberating the spirit of enterprise which we believe now is the prisoner of a policy that is putting a death tax on personal initiative."

MORE THAN ONE WAY

In London, Ont., New Democrat Leader David Lewis told a student audience there are other ways than nationalization to make industry operate for the public good.

The fourth party leader, Real Caouette of Social Credit, drew 1,000 enthusiastic persons to a rally in Drummondville, Que., where Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin is running for re-election. Caouette appealed to youth to work within the political system by helping parties like Social Credit.

Although Trudeau spent less time Wednesday campaigning than the other three leaders, he travelled the farthest of all — from Vancouver, where he spent most of the day resting, to Edmundston.

His chartered DC-9 jet made a brief stop in Ottawa to pick up Mrs. Trudeau, who

MORE CANDIDATES THAN AUDIENCE

HALIFAX (CP) — Candidates outnumbered the audience at a meet-your-candidate session here Wednesday night.

Four Halifax area candidates in Monday's federal election turned up for the public meeting along with two reporters, a campaign manager, the meeting organizer and the wife of one of the contenders.

The general audience numbered three.

Students Stumped

VANCOUVER (CP) — A survey conducted Wednesday by television station CHAN among 30 University of British Columbia students revealed that less than half the students could name Canada's four major political parties and their leaders.

The television station undertook the survey following comments by Humphrey Mostyn, the returning officer in Vancouver Centre that too few people know what is going on inn the current election campaign.

Of the 30 UBS students questioned, 18 knew the name of their home riding and half knew the name of the candidate who has represented the riding in the last house. Fourteen could name the political parties and their leaders.

FALLING POUND SHAKES FRANC

LONDON (AP) — The British pound fell to a record low for the third straight day today, unsettling world money markets and affecting other leading currencies including the French franc.

By early afternoon the pound was down to $2.3463 (U.S.) here, a drop of nearly 1½ cents from the close of $2.36 Wednesday night and an all-time low.

London dealers said the Paris foreign exchange market was "panicky." The French franc weakened against the U.S. dollar in moves related to the pound's troubles.

The pound has been falling because in the view of financial markets it was over-valued, due primarily to Britain's rate of inflation, the highest in Western Europe, and other economic troubles.

Once the pound had sharply declined, however, lowering its exchange rates against other currencies, it left the weaker ones among them exposed as the next targets for reduced exchange rates, the French franc prominent among them.

Dealers in London said the key element was government efforts to control inflation. Business, trade union and government leaders met today in an attempt to work out a voluntary price and wage restraint program for controlling inflation, now running at some 10 per cent a year.

Coup in Dahomey

COTONOU, Dahomey (AP) — The army seized power in a coup today in this West African country, toppling the government headed by Justin Ahomadegbe.

The Vietnam war is all but over for the United States.

The White House announced today that an agreement would be signed "within a matter of weeks" ending the war and bringing home U.S. troops and prisoners of war.

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger made the announcement in Washington at a specially called news conference. The U.S. move appeared to have been forced on the White House by Hanoi's announcement of terms of the agreement earlier today.

Kissinger said the nine points of the agreement as announced on Radio Hanoi are essentially correct. (See separate story).

Hanoi said the United States had agreed to sign a peace pact next Tuesday, a week before the presidential election, but then backed off and asked for further negotiations, saying it was having difficulty getting Saigon to go along.

North Vietnam accused the U.S. of bad faith in putting off implementation of the agreement three times on the grounds that it was having difficulty in obtaining the agreement of the South Vietnamese government of President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Kissinger, however, said in his news conference he is convinced Thieu will accept the terms of the cease-fire.

"A separate agreement between North Vietnam and the United States does not concern us in any way. We in South Vietnam have the right of self-determination."

However, the Saigon broadcast did not say whether Thieu would oppose a Hanoi-Washington settlement of the war.

Unofficial sources in the presidential palace said earlier that Thieu would not be averse to a Hanoi-Washington agreement as long as the United States continued its Vietnamization and other military and economic commitments to South Vietnam.

In a broadcast Tuesday, Thieu conceded a ceasefire could come soon but said he never would agree to a coalition government with the Viet Cong.

The Hanoi proposal would have Saigon and the Viet Cong negotiate for an election of a coalition government.

Kissinger claimed one of the problems which still needed to be settled before an agreement was signed was whether Washington should sign the agreement on behalf of South Vietnam.

He said this was not a serious difficulty, but it is understandable that the South Vietnamese, who have suffered the most during the war and who must remain under the settlement, "should want to sign their own peace treaty."

Kissinger said a final agreement could be reached after one more meeting of three or four days with Hanoi's negotiators, and would result in a cease-fire to be followed within 60 days by the withdrawal of U.S. troops and the release of all American prisoners.

He said the timing of the agreement was not motivated by the presidential election. The administration had "no intention" of disclosing it and would not have if Hanoi had not broken the news.

At the Paris peace talks, the U.S. officially protested Hanoi's disclosure of the agreement. Ambassador William Porter called it a "most unfortunate violation of our understanding," but Hanoi de-

CRTC REFUSES CABLE TV HIKE

OTTAWA — The Canadian Radio Television Commission denied today an application by Victoria Cablevision Ltd. to amend its cable television broadcasting licence for Victoria to increase the monthly service charge to $5 from $4.50.

The commission said the applicant failed to convince it that an increase in subscriber fees is necessary for the maintenance and improvement of subscriber service.

This decision takes into consideration, said the commission, the applicant's current financial position in relation to its estimate of the costs of the improvements proposed and that the applicant has kept subscriber fees constant for 11 years.

The commission has, in its policy statement on cable television, taken the position that cable systems are a part of the over-all broadcasting system and that they should contribute to development of that system.

In this way, the broadcasting system will be strengthened and broadcastiig service available to cable subscribers will thereby be improved.

Canada Faces Rough Times

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Canada's chief statistician and an economist today predicted rough times ahead for Canada on unemployment and an economic downturn.

Sylvia Ostry said her projection is for 2.6 million more workers in the labor force by 1980 than there were in 1970—a growth of about 30 per cent in the decade or 2.4 per cent a year.

This compares with an expected increase of 1.4 per cent a year in the United States, and less than one half of one per cent yearly in Sweden and Japan.

And economist Carl Beigie said that figures available next month will show "a very sharp downturn" in the rate of real economic growth.

"Listening to some of the commentaries that have been made in the past month or so, one gets the impression that this year ended with the second quarter, from which point 1973 will carry forward in an onward and upward march to full recovery.

Beigie, executive director of the Private Planning Association of Canada, said: "Virtually every recent indicator — retail sales, merchandise trade, new orders for manufactured goods, manufacturing inventories, industrial production, unemployment — suggests a very sharp downturn in the rate of growth of real economic activity between the second and third quarters."

Miss Ostry, chief statistician for Statistics Canada, cautioned the annual business outlook seminar of the Conference Board of Canada that her predictions were based on many assumptions and projections.

The conference board is a business-oriented research organization. The annual conference brings together top experts from business, government, universities and other organizations for a wide-ranging view of the future.

Subsidies for Private Hospitals

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

The provincial government announced Wednesday that it plans to subsidize private hospitals which show need to help them withstand the effects of the provincial minimum wage hike on their operating costs.

Premier Barrett and Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi indicated hospitals which apply for government help will receive it on an individually-negotiated basis. Levi said some have already indicated such need.

Conservative house leader Scott Wallace said he had received a letter from Glengarry Private Hospital of Victoria informing him that the daily rate per patient would be going up to $16 from $14 as a result of the minimum wage hike.

Barrett answered by saying that the government does not indend to allow the wage hike to make any private hospital patients suffer.

Outside the house, Levi said that cases of hospitals requiring assistance will be dealt with on an individual basis.

He said "there is no way we will blanket everybody in on this" and added that hospitals will have to show that they are "specific cases of hardship."

The rate paid by the rehabilitation department to private hospitals which take in welfare cases varies between $280 and $310 per month per patient.

Levi said in some cases the hospitals are heavily dependent on the welfare cases sent to them by the province, indicating that the operators are not in a position to pay the increase in the minimum wage level.

Barrett said during the debate that it is not the policy of the government to favor profit-making in the health field and indicated that his government considers it an "urgent priority" to provide non-profit chronic care services under the framework of the B.C. hospital insurance plan.

Barrett said it has been a promise of the Social Credit party since 1956 to remove the profit-making aspect from the health field and charged that the Socreds never did anything about it when they were government.

"We are now the government and we intend to move on this," Barrett said. "We want the operators of private hospitals to understand that we don't believe they should be operating at a profit. We mean it and we intend to act on it."

The premier said the government would move "with as much dispatch and openness as we can."

He said it has been difficult for the government to determine the effect of the minimum wage hike on the various sectors of the community because there was no research ever done on the subject by the previous administration.

The subsidies going to the private hospitals from the welfare department, he said, would hopefully be on an interim basis until the province can set up the non-profit
